JEWELS FOR JEWELS

of course, and why not? In the natural order of things nothing else is to be expected. Our stock of Rings contain what are jewels with a large J. It's the season now when the belle of the ball weaves her spells, and beauty instinctively seeks the reinforcement of art. When it comes to jewelry we are floating down the stream of fashion, and are nothing if not correct. Our stock wasn't purchased to keep. Sufficient unto the season is the stock thereof. In our case "Sell" is the order of business, and sell we will. We are offering everything at reduced prices.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default has been made in the conditions of the mortgage hereinafter described, by failure to pay the interest and premium thereon, which was due on the last Saturday in November A. D. 1890 in the sum of Six and 67-100 dollars ($6.67), and a like sum of interest and premium which became due and payable on the last Saturday of each and every month since that time, none of which several sums have ever been paid.

The mortgagee pursuant to the provisions of said mortgage, elects to and does declare the whole amount of said debt, both principal, interest and premium, due and payable, by reason of such defaults.

No action or proceeding at law or otherwise has been instituted to recover the said debt or any part thereof. Said mortgage contains a power of sale on default, and has been duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Crow Wing county, Minnesota, where the land therein described is situated.

Names of mortgagors: Patrick Hefferen and Elizabeth Hefferen, husband and wife.

Name of mortgagee at the time of the execution of said mortgage: The "National Building Loan and Protective Union," a corporation of the state of Minnesota. The said corporation, on May 26, 1891, duly amended its articles of incorporation and by-laws, among other things changing its name to "The Pioneer Savings and Loan Company," and by that name has ever since been and now is known.

Date of mortgage: August 1st A. D. 1890.

Date when and where recorded: August 18th, 1890, at 5 o'clock p. m., in the office of the Register of Deeds of Crow Wing county, Minnesota, in book I, of mortgages, on page 42.

Amount due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice: Nine hundred and sixty six and 67-100 dollars, ($966.67.)

Description of mortgaged premises: Lots numbered eleven (11) and twelve (12) in block numbered five (5) in the town of East Brainerd, according to the recorded plat thereof.

Time of sale: Saturday January 21st 1893, at 10 o'clock A. M.

Place of sale: The front door of the court house in the city of Brainerd, Crow Wing county, Minnesota.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That by reason of the facts above set forth, said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the premises therein and above described, and said premises will be sold at the time and place aforesaid, pursuant to law and to the power of sale in said mortgage contained, to satisfy the amount that shall then be due thereon, and the expenses of such foreclosure and sale.

THE PEOPLE'S CHOICE.

Senator Davis Receives a Bare Majority on Joint Ballot.

Lee, Fleming, Fuller and Dunn Vote for the Choice of their Constituents.

ST. PAUL, Jan. 19.—Senator C. K. Davis was re-elected to the United States senate from Minnesota on Wednesday. But there was no overwhelming majority and before the vote was taken it was an open question as to whether the opposition would be able to break up the Davis followers or not. Every representative and senator was in his seat at the roll call on joint ballot, and if the entire republican strength had been given to Mr. Davis, his majority would have been 26 instead of one. The scene was an exciting one and until Speaker Lee's name was called, the last to vote, Mr. Davis had not been elected, he only having received 84 votes up to that time. When his name was called and he cast his vote for Davis cheers rent the old capitol building that would wake the dead. Hats handkerchiefs and papers went into the air. It was impossible to restore order for some time, but the speaker finally announced the vote as follows:

Davis 85, Owen 24, Lawer 48, Merriam 2, Scheffer 2, Clapp 3, Lind 2, Dickinson 1, Stark 1.

The republicans of Minnesota who elected representatives to the legislature on the principle that the men of their choice would vote for the return of Mr. Davis to the United States senate, and found them wanting when most needed, are censuring those who bolted the caucus nominee in the most severe terms. The 46th district can well be proud of her representatives who stood by the choice of their constituents from first to last.

With the unanimity which had been declared all over the state by republicans for Mr. Davis it was a peculiar incident how close he came to defeat, and one which will go down in history, and those who were untrue to the trust reposed in them only knew for a certainty the whys and wherefores of the combination which was formed to defeat him. It certainly will be an unpleasant task for the members of the twenty-eighth session who were friendly to Davis' return and were elected on that platform bu[illegible] failed to vote for him, to explain satisfactorily to their constituents why they failed in their duty.

However, the struggle is over and the state of Minnesota is to be congratulated that it was not forever disgraced.

EX PRESIDENT Ruthuford B. Hayes is dead. He died on Tuesday, the 17th inst., of neuralgia of the heart, at the age of seventy years. He was a statesman of the first rank, a brave soldier and a fearless and upright citizen. In his death the country loses one of her most valuable as well as foremost citizens. It is gratifying to see with what unanimity the press of the country have done him justice.

BRO. STIVERS of the Journal now claims that he did not want to go to the legislature,—he was just a candidate because he wanted to secure a railroad for the northern part of the state, and nobody else could do it but himself. Yes, judging from his action in the last legislature, he wanted to go there for the railroads. He did no work for this county or anybody else but the railroads then, and it certainly is not their fault that he is not there now. The people, however, wanted a man to serve them and not the railroads, so Mr. Stivers was not returned.

EVERY week or two the Tribune, of this city, takes it upon itself to abuse the Northern Pacific railroad company for what it terms its outragious passenger service for this city. As far as we can learn the Tribune reflects nobodys opinion except its own. The company's passenger service to this city, considering Brainerd's location to the main line and the amount of traffic this city affords, is generally considered good. It would probably give such better satisfaction to our business men if No. 5 left St. Paul in the morning and brought the morning papers and morning mail from the Twin Cities, but this change could be secured more promptly, probably, by conferring with the company instead of abusing it as the Tribune does.

Senator Davis Re-elected.

On Wednesday Senator C. K. Davis was elected to succeed himself in the United State senate by a joint session of both branches of the legislature. He had just barely votes enough to elect him, notwithstanding the fact that the republicans have 22 majority on joint ballot; and one of these votes was case by an alliance senator. We cannot see how those republicans who voted against him can justify there action in this matter. Mr. Davis was endorsed by two republican conventions and the fight for the control of the Legislature was made on the strength of Mr. Davis' candidacy for that position. Hence it was nothing short of rank treachery to the republican cause of this state to vote against him. It was just as treacherous as it would be for a democratic elector to vote against Mr. Cleveland, and every republican who did so should receive such treatment in the future as treachery to his party demands.

WORLD'S FAIR ODDITIES

Some of the Queer Things to Be Exhibited.

CALIFORNIA'S SENSATIONAL SHOW

There Is an Old Time Stagecoach and the Complete Outfit of a "Road Agent." From South America Will Come Either Alive or in Statuary Samples of Natives.

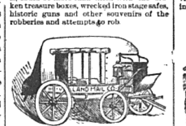
As all roads once led to Rome, it now seems that all roads lead to the great World's fair at Chicago, and along the converging pathways are carried not only the magnificent machinery of war and peace, the cannon and the plowshare, but also the poetry of human nature as expressed in the marble of the sculptor and on the canvas of the artist.

But these are not all, though they may be the chiefest. Adventure and savagery are to have their exhibit as well as culture and science. From California there is to come a display of stages and stage robbing relics—a collection of grewsome things calculated to stir the blood in the heart of any old forty-niner who has known the weird exhilaration of being "held up" or of joining in a man hunt after the "road agent" had fled and a posse was on his trail.

Black Bart's "tools of the trade" will be on view, but perhaps the chief interest may center about a gigantic coach, known as a "mud wagon," that used to run between Sacramento and Virginia City. The full history of this particular vehicle is yet to be obtained, for when rescued the mud wagon was entirely separated from all who ever knew or cared about its early trips. An agent found it at Pieta Station, in northern California, doing duty as a commonplace, everyday sort of a passenger coach. He immediately bought it. The wagon is from thirty to forty years old and weighs 3,000 pounds.

Six horses used to draw it into Virginia City. Evidences of long wear show on the wagon, but in every way the specimen is the best that could have been selected when stagecoaches were of the first importance to travelers.

And the old stage, great as its capacity is, could be more than filled with the broken treasure boxes, wrecked iron stage safes, historic guns and other souvenirs of the robberies and attempts to rob.



OVERLAND STAGE.

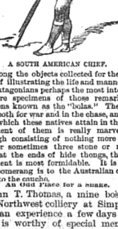
Black Bart, the prince of the robbers who are in Folsom and San Quentin, is himself a free man, and he may yet be induced to pose at Chicago in the act that was his specialty and "hold up" the stage express for the edification of the world. His outfit will be there at least, and with it a couple of his photographs, enlarged and very accurate. Bart's cheap black valise will be shown just as it was found in the Tuolumne county mountains and with the contents exactly as they were then—a can of corned beef, a can of lunch ham, a can of currant jelly, a sealed bottle of pickles, a diagonally striped necktie of white and light blue and two pairs of cuffs. On one of the cuffs is the laundry mark, "826 J.," which gave Detective Harry Morse a clew and led to the capture.

This notorious robber "held up" and robbed twenty-eight stages in ten years, and yet he was shot only once—when Shotgun Messenger George M. Hackett, now of Marysville, slightly wounded him.

Side by side with these relics of lawlessness will be a display of the savagery of nature—lifelike groups of untamed barbarians in South America. Even the cannibals of Terra del Fuego will be represented at the fair by full sized figures, showing them as they appear in a state of nature, engaged in their everyday occupations.

It is said that the only redeeming feature of the strange land which the explorer Magellan called the Land of Fire, because of the numerous fires which these natives keep perpetually lighted, is the absence of mosquitoes. In the far regions of the arctic, where the cold is most intense, these insect pests abound and render existence intolerable, but in Terra del Fuego they are not found owing to the intensity of the cold and the extreme dampness of the climate. There are very few insects of other species on the island and no reptiles whatever.

The savage inhabitants, notwithstanding the frigidity of the atmosphere, go almost naked, wearing no clothes save the skin of some animal hung over the windward side of the body. The men, though only averaging about five feet in height, are enormously powerful, and the women are as strong muscularly as their husbands. One accomplishment possessed by these remarkable people is an amazing skill in the throwing of stones. They fling them with both hands and with such force and accuracy as to render them most formidable antagonists in a fight. They are also the most skillful "bolas" slingers in the world, rivaling in the dexterous use of that instrument the old time Balearic islanders.



A SOUTH AMERICAN CHIEF.

Among the objects collected for the purpose of illustrating the life and manners of the Patagonians perhaps the most interesting are specimens of those remarkable weapons known as the "bolas." They are used both for war and in the chase, and the skill which these natives attain in the employment of them is really marvelous. Though consisting of nothing more than two or sometimes three stone or metal balls at the ends of hide thongs, this instrument is most formidable. It is what the boomerang is to the Australian or the lasso to the gaucho.

An Odd Place for a Snake.

John T. Thomas, a mine boss at the Northwest colliery at Simpson, had an experience a few days ago that is worthy of special mention from the fact that it is supposed to be unprecedented in the history of mining. He was engaged in eating his dinner and was seated fully 700 feet from the mouth of the slope when he observed a long, slender object wriggling along the floor of the mine a short distance from him. Upon closer inspection it proved to be a garter snake such as is seen in the fields hereabouts frequently.

It was twenty-two inches in length, and was immediately killed by the men whom Mr. Thomas had called to see this ordinary sight in such an extraordinary place. Mr. Thomas has followed the vocation of a miner in this country and Wales for thirty-seven years. In the latter country he has seen eels in the mines which had been hatched from spawn brought there by the flooding of the underground works, but he has yet to hear of a similiar case of snake finding.—Carbondale (Pa.) Leader.

'TIS A STRANGE SIGHT.

Where the Sea Water Spouts Up Through a Hole.

One of the strangest things to be seen at Santa Cruz, Cal., these days is a queer spouting rock, or rather a tunnel and rocky aperture, through which the sea water boils and bubbles furiously. Hundreds of people have been out to see it. The queer spouting rock was developed during a recent storm. Every two or three minutes alternately a volume of water sixty feet high shoots into the air. To view it wholly from the surface, it appears to be a gigantic geyser, compared with which those of the Yellowstone park are at times insignificant.

The water which is thrown up in such a great volume is salt brine from the Pacific ocean. For a thousand years possibly and maybe more, for nobody knows, the waves of the ocean have been playing such an earnest game of hide-and-go-seek with themselves and the rocky shore that they have worn great chasms and tunnels into the land.

It is a rock bound shore, but the rock for the most part is not very hard. It is mainly a siliceous or micaceous sandstone of a light yellow hue, and if you walk over it while it is wet you must be cautious, for it is almost as slippery as soapstone. In this curious stone the waves have cut long avenues and dug out caves far inland.

In some places the tops have already fallen or partly so, and one may peer over the edge and look through queer circular holes fifty feet down into the seething blue waters. The tunnels, open cuts and this strange spurting rock are two miles south of Santa Cruz, not far from the Esplanade and in full view of the crescent bay, the mouths of the Salinas and San Lorenzo rivers and the white shaft erected to the memory of the Franciscan friar, Junipero Serra. The azure of the ocean, the faint blue of the two wings of the Cascades and the varied colors of the sky, with the other surroundings, make the place one of singular beauty.

It was odd to see such a column extending out of what appeared to be a level stretch of land covered thickly with grass, which for much of the year was redolent of wild flowers. Very fantastic the water appeared. Day and night at intervals of two and three minutes the column would shoot up and as suddenly fall, only to appear again as before. Throngs went to see it and wonder at its fantastic colors. The wilder the storm the loftier the column. It varied from forty to sixty feet high, according to the force of the waves.

THE SPOUTING CAVE.

An examination of the ground thereabouts revealed novel things. It was found that a long, narrow groove or tunnel led into the shore. It was widest at the sea end, like a wedge, and grew narrower as it reached into the land. It extended about eighty feet.

Into this the waves thrust and hammered as they rolled in from toward the mountains across the bay which borders the Salinas river. The waves crashed against the end of the tunnel, they kept wearing away the soft sandstone which composed it and a portion of the roof above. At length the waves extended far beyond the weak portion of the roof, and there was a rebound which was very powerful. Gradually it ate away the roof.

Suddenly during the storm it burst through, making an aperture about two feet square and looking much like a hopper to a grain mill. It appears to have been at a point where a peculiar strain was put on a portion of the cap rock, which cracked and fell. When this occurred the water was partially freed from the queer underground prison, and as the waves played back and forth it sent the column skyward.

A loud sound accompanied it, like the roar of artillery. The bending of the lithe eucalyptus trees, the incoming of the many white waves, the falling of the sheets of rain and the fury of the tempest made up a scene inexpressibly grand. As the waves died down the lofty column of water ceased to appear, but as they increased in power with the storm it again shot up into the air. Altogether it is a new attraction for that part of the beach.

Only Sixteen, but a Terror.

Albert Sharrard, a sixteen-year old disciple of Jesse James, is reported to be "terrorizing" the ranchmen near Dungeness, Wash. He began by breaking into a settler's cabin and stealing two rifles and a quantity of ammunition. Two deputy sheriffs who tried to arrest him he caught off their guard, and covering them with his rifle forced them to lay down their arms, turn round and walk home with their hands held above their heads, while he added their weapons to his arsenal. Two weeks ago he held up two men and robbed them of their watches and money. He has robbed several cabins lately, and it is reported that of the petty thieves who have joined him he has organized an outlaw band.

An Ancient Legend.

Had ever a preacher of the inevitability of death, in any age or clime, a more poetic or striking presentation of the grim theme than in the following legend? From ancient prophet to the modern worker in the life insurance vineyard none ever made a more vivid showing of the impotency of seeking to escape the dread messenger of omnipotence.

The story is of King Solomon, who figures largely in oriental tradition outside of Hebraic lore. It is told of him that, walking one day in a great city, accompanied by a friend, an awesome figure was perceived by them at the head of the street.

"Who is that?" inquired the friend in terror.

Solomon looked and answered, "It is the angel of death."

Then the friend begged of Solomon, who had the power of instantaneous transportation, to send him at once to some faroff spot, and Solomon dispatched him in a moment to India, thousands of miles away.

The angel of death meanwhile approached Solomon and asked, "Who was that man with whom you were just talking?"

Solomon gave the name and the angel of death said, "Strange that he should have been here, for I am ordered to call for him tonight in India!"—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

A Singular Proceeding.

An instance of an interested juryman was reported not long ago. A jury had been empaneled, when a man stepped forward and explained that, having been summoned to serve, he wished to be allowed to do so at once, as he had to attend a funeral at a distant place in the latter portion of the week.

A place was therefore made for him in the jury box; the case was tried, and owing to this man's obstinacy a verdict of acquittal was secured. It was subsequently discovered that the man had never been summoned to serve at all, and that the prisoner was his friend.—London Tit-Bits.

The Number "Three" in the Bible.

When the world was created we find it and its surroundings composed of three elements—air, water and land—the whole lighted by the sun, moon and stars. Adam had three sons mentioned by name, and so did Noah the patriarch. Daniel was thrown into a den with three lions for the crime of praying three times. Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego were rescued from the fiery furnace. Job had three special friends. There were three patriarchs—Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. Samuel was called three times; Elijah prostrated himself three times on the dead body of the child; Samson deceived Delilah three times before she discovered the secret of his great power, and the Ten Commandments were delivered on the third day.

Jonah was three days and nights in the whale's belly. "Simon, lovest thou me?" was repeated three times. Paul makes mention of the Three Graces—Faith, Hope and Charity. The famous allegorical dreams of the baker and butler were to come to pass in three days. Then we have the Holy Trinity—Father, Son and Holy Ghost; the sacred letters on the cross were three in number, they being I. H. S.; so also the famous Roman motto was composed of three words—viz., In hoc signo.—St. Louis Republic.

A Tale of Two Barns.

There was a man named Hibbs who bought a farm, built a large, stately dwelling at the end of a long, shady avenue of maples and settled down to enjoy the comfort and independence of a farmer's life. He built a cozy little barn of logs and shingled it with clapboards.

There was another man of the name of Hubbs who bought a farm in the same neighborhood, built a cozy little dwelling of logs, shingled it with clapboards and settled down to the hard, grinding monotony of a farmer's life. This man Hubbs built a large, stately barn at the end of a long, shady avenue of maples. At the end of ten years Hibbs' big house had broken him up, and Hubbs' big barn had enabled him to buy Hibbs' stately dwelling for about half price and move it over on his own farm.

Hubbs has a big dwelling and a big barn and represents his county in the state legislature. Hibbs has a little log cabin and a little log stable and is trying to sell out to Hubbs. He wants to quit farming and travel with a peddling wagon.—Toronto Mail.

Unconscious Feminine Cruelty.

"Let me off at Thirteenth street, conductor," said a woman as she paid her fare on a Broadway car at Cortlandt street.

The car was packed, the place just two miles away and the woman a New Yorker. From 50 to 100 people would get on and off, half a hundred stops were to be made and something like a half to three-quarters of an hour would be consumed before reaching Thirteenth street.

Yet this woman, who bore evidences of more than ordinary intelligence in her face and from her easy self assurance every indication of being able to take care of herself, expected the conductor to remember her request and to put her off at the right street.

The Broadway conductors are the hardest worked, most abused and criticised railroad officials in this city, but this is the sort of thing they are called upon to endure every hour in the day. It is usually at the hands of women, and is unnecessary, foolish and cruelly inconsiderate.—New York Herald.

Modern Matrimony.

Jones (calling on Smith in the evening)—I thought I would find you at home. You don't go out much at night now?

Smith—No. I've given up all my clubs and societies. I should be glad to have you come up and spend an evening with me occasionally.

Jones—But your wife might think me in the way.

Smith—Oh, she's never home at night till late. Tonight she's at a meeting of the Ladies' Society for Supplying Thimbles to the Destitute Poor. Tomorrow night she goes to the Queen's Daughters, next night to the sociable of the Royal Women, and so on every night. Come up and see a fellow. It's awfully lonely to be married, I can tell you.—New York Press.

Suffocated by Sweet Odors.

The Sybarites slept on beds stuffed with rose leaves; the tyrant Dionysius had his couch filled with them; Versus would travel with a garland on his head and around his neck, and over his litter he had a thin net, with rose leaves intertwined. Antiochus luxuriated upon a bed of blooms even in winter days and nights, and when Cleopatra entertained Antony she had roses covering the floor to the depth, it is said, of an ell.

We are told that Heliogabalus supplied so many at one of his banquets that several of his guests were suffocated in the endeavor to extricate themselves from the abundance—victims of a surfeit of sweet odors.—Philadelphia Times.

Ammonia in Coal.

Some 13,000,000 tons of coal are burned in London yearly. About 4,000,000 are utilized by the gas manufacturing companies; 9,000,000 are burned in household and industrial fire grates. Each ton contains sufficient ammonia to produce, if treated with sulphuric acid, twenty-two to twenty-eight pounds of sulphate of ammonia. The total loss of this fertilizing agent is therefore, say, 9,990 tons. As the price of sulphate of ammonia is £9 10s. the ton, the monetary loss is £94,905 every year. If we were less wasteful we should not be so much obliged to ransack Chili and Peru for artificial manures.—National Review.

Cures for Nervousness.

In connection with the water and air cures for nervous patients certain respiratory and muscular exercises are advantages, and may, in certain advanced stages of the disease, be applied passively by massage and similar operations. Among other things gardening and other occupations in the open air are of great benefit. Unhappily, in the large cities, where the majority of the patients live, there are only a few so fortunately situated as to be able to enjoy such employment to any considerable extent.

Those who are able to go clear into the country and work in the fields and woods in the sweat of their brows will perhaps, if they are prudent and other conditions are favorable, effect a happy cure of their nervous disorders.—Dr. Bilsinger in Popular Science Monthly.

Melody and Music.

Melody was the beginning and ever will be the essence of music through all ages. The Greeks based their melody on the tetrachord system, which they may have copied from the natural melody in human speech. Gregorian chants, Protestant hymn tunes, many national melodies and other musical themes are based on natural melody in human speech.—Exchange.

THE GENUINE

KEELEY TREATMENT

Authorized and under the direction of of the LESLEY E. KEELEY CO., Dwight, Ill., for cure of

Liquor, Opium
—AND—
Tobacco Habits

BY THE USE OF DR. LESLIE E. KEELEY'S DOUBLE CHLORIDE OF GOLD REMEDIES.

Indorsed by progressive physicians, philanthropists and divines, including Dr. T. DeWitt Talmage, of Brooklyn Tabernacle, who recently visited Dwight and addressed the 700 patients in line. The United States government has adopted these remedies for use in all States and National Soldiers' Homes. Carefully kept records prove 95 per cent. permanent cures; 66,000 homes already made happy. The objectionable features of Sanitarium treatment removed. No hospital; no restriction. All necessary liquors supplied during treatment. Patients are simply residents like ourselves. Terms $25 per week; board extra, $7 to $15 per week, to suit purse and inclination. Good accommodations, including baths, at the Institute.

NOTE OF WARNING.

To the Public:

As a matter of justice to ourselves and to the reputation of Dr. Leslie E. Keeley's Double Chloride of Gold Remedies for the cure of the Liquor, Opium, Morphine and Tobacco Diseases, and Neurasthenia, we warn the public that these remedies are used by no institution or sanitarium in the United States, except those established by our company under the uniform name of "THE KEELEY INSTITUTE."

All others claiming to use our remedies are frauds and impostors.

We have now sixty Keeley Institutes established in various parts of the United States, where the Keeley Treatment is administered, and the Keeley remedies sold. We, however, caution all to examine well and know that they are dealing with GENUINE REPRESENTATIVES, authorized by us, before taking treatment or purchasing remedies.

The misleading establishments use the name of "Bichloride of Gold" or similar titles. The newspapers often fail to discriminate sufficiently to know that they are imitators. This is a matter of public welfare, and hence this warning.

We desire inspection of our Institution and invite correspondence, which is strictly confidential.

Respectfully Yours,

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of [illegible], and awarded that company the highest [illegible] of[illegible]ered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world, and in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory.

Joseph D. Ensign and Daniel G. Cash, Partners as Cash & Ensign, Plaintiffs.
vs.
Charles F. Kindred, Defendant.

Notice is hereby given that under and by virtue of an execution in the above entitled action now in my hands for collection I have levied upon, as the property of the judgment creditor, the following described real estate situate in Crow Wing County, Minnesota, to-wit: The south half of the south-west quarter and the northeast quarter of the southwest quarter and the northwest quarter of the southeast quarter of section twenty in township forty-five of range thirty according to government survey, and will sell the same or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy said execution, which is for the sum of $4,100.05 with interest since February 17, 1887, at public auction on the 9th day of January, 1893, at ten o'clock in the forenoon at the front door of the court house, in the city of Brainerd in said Crow Wing County.

Dated November 22nd, 1892.

LEON E. LUM, Attorney.
HENRY SPALDING, Sheriff of Crow Wing County.

(First publication December 9, 1892.)

Notice of Mortgage Sale.

Whereas, on the 26th day of November A. D. 1888, Felix Duclos and Martha Duclos executed and delivered to the Lombard Investment Company a mortgage deed, with power of sale, to secure payment of a bond for the sum of six hundred dollars, with interest coupons attached, payable on the first days of June and December, each year, in which mortgage they conveyed to the Lombard Investment Company, the following described real estate, situated in the County of Crow Wing and state of Minnesota, towit: The west half (w½) of the northeast quarter (ne¼,) the northeast quarter (ne¼) of the northwest quarter (nw¼,) and the northwest quarter (nw¼) of the southeast quarter (se¼) of section six (6,) in township forty-three (43) north and range thirty (30) west of the fourth principal meridian, and whereas said mortgage was filed for record in the office of the Register of Deeds in said county, aforesaid, on the 7th day of December, 1888, and recorded in book H of mortgages, at page 191.

And whereas, it was provided in said mortgage deed and bond, that if said mortgagors failed to pay said bond and interest coupons as the same became due and payable, or any part thereof then the whole amount secured by said mortgage deed, should become due and payable, and the mortgagee or its assignee, might proceed to foreclose, by selling said real estate at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash.

And Whereas, said mortgagors have failed to pay the interest coupons, due and payable June first and December first 1889 and June first and December first, 1890, June first and December first 1891 and June and December first 1892.

And Whereas, under the conditions of said mortgage and bond, the whole sum is now due and payable, and there is now due and payable thereon the sum of six hundred and eighteen dollars, with interest at six per cent. from June first 1889.

And Whereas, no action or proceeding has been instituted at law to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, and whereas said mortgage and bond have been duly assigned to Mrs. Austin G. Bowditch and said assignment filed for record in the office of the Register of Deeds, aforesaid, on the 27th day of October, 1892, and recorded in book L of Mortgages at page 79.

Now Therefore, public notice is hereby given that, I, Henry Spalding, Sheriff of Crow Wing county, and state of Minnesota, at the request of Mrs. Austin G. Bowditch, the owner of said mortgage and bond, will foreclose the same by sale of the mortgaged premises, hereinbefore described, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of the court house in the city of Brainerd, county seat of said county of Crow Wing, and state of Minnesota, on the 23d day of January 1893, at the hour of ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day; and that the proceeds of said sale will be applied, first in payment of the cost and disbursements of said sale, including the sum of fifty dollars, ($50.00,) attorney fees, and second, in payment of the amount due upon said bond, with interest as far as the proceeds will pay the same.

HENRY SPALDING,
T. H. HULL, Sheriff of Crow Wing County.
Attorney for Mrs. Austin G. Bowditch.

Rutherford B. Hayes.

GEN. R. B. HAYES IS DEAD.

HIS DEMISE SUDDEN AND UNEXPECTED.

Neuralgia of the Heart, From Which He Had Been a Sufferer for Only a Few Days, Caused His Death.

But One Ex-President Left.

Fremont, Ohio, Jan. 18.—Ex-President R. B. Hayes died at 11 o'clock tonight, but the information of his death was not known for some time later, as everything was kept remarkably quiet in the vicinity of the Hayes mansion. It was not until after the condition of ex-President Hayes was improving nicely, and he was now resting easily, allayed most anxiety, that the news reached the ears of Webb Hayes with the announcement that his father had just died proved a shock to all. Mr. Hayes is said to have learned that the condition of his father took a sudden change early in the evening, and rapid dissolution followed.

Ex-President Hayes was brought home last night suffering from an attack of neuralgia of the heart, with which he had been stricken at Cleveland. It was the second attack of the kindle had received within two weeks, and, although his condition was regarded as serious, no one and secited the alarm of his family, the announcement given then by Dr. Hillist, the family physician, led them to believe that the patient would soon recover. For this reason, the sudden death of the ex-president's illness was kept from the public, and the fact that he was suffering from heart trouble did not become generally known. He had remained almost constantly at the disposition of his family, and no alarming symptoms appearing until this evening, when he became rapidly worse.

Ex-President Hayes left home last Monday on a trip to Columbus, Buffalo and Chicago, at which last mentioned place he spent a few days with his son Webb C. Hayes. During the last month he had complained of one or two slight attacks of neuralgia of the heart, but as they soon passed away he thought nothing of it. On Saturday he experienced a recurrence of the malady but being prepared for it, he continued on his journey accompanied by his son Webb. Sunday he received a telegram of the condition of the family and he was met at the train by his son, Rutherford B. Hayes, and Dr. Hillist, the family physician, who was waiting, detaining the carriage they were driven to the residence, a mile and a half away, where all attention was given the stricken statesman. Monday night the Hayes house was kept quiet and Dr. Hillist was constant in his attendance at the bedside. The doctor stated that he expected the end would come with a severe attack of heart neuralgia at any time, and that he had received while at Cleveland, but that he was in hopes that he would not out of danger. Tuesday there was apparently a change, and it was hoped the ex-president, when it came, was a terrible one.

No Hope for Murderer Harris.

Albany, Jan. 18.—The court of appeals today sustained the decision of the lower court in the case of the people vs. Clay Harris, appellant. HOW CONGRESSMEN LIVE.

Facts From a Washington Landlord That Are Startling.

"Congressmen live at my best local patrons," said a Washington hotel-keeper recently, "and by that I include both senators and representatives. Congressman Blank has a room, comfortable but not spacious, on the third floor; for which he pays $120 a month. This is for the room alone, as my place is strictly on the European plan. What does Blank do for food? Wait a minute and I'll get his ticket for to-day's dinner. Here it is—$3.80. A very modest meal, though it included a pint of wine, but no cigars.

"This man is a fair average of my guests, and he spends no less than $8 a day for his meals, breakfasting and dining here and lunching at the capitol. So much for rooms and board he pays me not less than $270 a month. Others go a good deal higher than that, but on an average that's about the figure. Of course, a good many of my patrons give suppers or dinners quite often to a party of friends, which is that much in addition to their individual accounts.

"Very often one of my guests, a member of Congress from the Empire State, gives me his entire month's pay, about $417, in liquidation of his bill for thirty days. I have another statesman for a boarder who does not grumble at $40 a week for two medium-sized rooms. But my star guest is from the extreme West, and he shells out $11 a day for his quarters, whether he stays one day or six months."

The thought drove her wild. Oh, if she had only made a money-lender her own! That calm, complacent, impassive mammy, leaning back in her rocking-chair, was the money-lender belonged to her! What was ten thousand to her, in her stout, middle-aged self-assurance? If Maisie had but owned herself—oh, Jose!

One evening, at last, she stood leaning over her as he loved to, do, and watching her close for every chance of emotion on that cool surface of hers. Why did he eye her so hard; why note the rise and fall of that snow-white bosom? Vaguely Maisie felt he was preparing a bonshbell for her. He was toying with a ring on his finger.

"Who gave you that, Jose?" she asked, half trembling.

"A friend," he answered her without a warping. "A woman, of course,—My wife, in Nebraska."

CHAPTER III.

AT ALL COSTS AND RISKS.

The universe reeled round, with Maisie for its pivot. She could hardly sit on her chair. She dropped and swooned with horror. Jose Mansfield leaned over her, and held her up with one large hand. She was beautiful, so, That dropping head, like a shapely shoulder—how marbly white! how magnificent! how satinlike! how faultless!

He held her for a minute or so. He was in no hurry for the girl to come round. This bewilderment brought out vividly the strong points of her face. She looked like a daughter of Niobe in the Florentine halls; for though Jose Mansfield boasted himself a true son of the prairie, he was not long let for all that; he had "done" his Europe.

In a short time, as he gazed, she opened her eyes, and came to again. "Jose, what's the matter?" "Oh, Jose," she cried, not so much angry as appalled and unnerved. "You should have told me at the first. You have a wife in Nebraska!

"Yes, Maisie, my child," the poet answered, peering deeper still into those liquid eyes, too perfect to be clear. "I have a wife in Nebraska,—in the Lunatic Asylum."

At the word, with a sudden bound, Maisie took heart of grace again, "In the lunatic asylum!" she cried gasping. "Jose, Jose—insane!"

The poet bowed his head. "Incurable," he answered, with a Sphynx like air. It was a part of Jose Mansfield's pose to be Sphynx-like and inscrutable!

Maisie drew a deep breath again. In many of the States—above all out west—hopeless insanity is good ground for divorce. Maisie knew that very well. There were not many moves on the matrimonial board she was unknown to Maisie. A tremor ran through her frame. She had to look before she dared to go on tentatively to the second question.

"And you've never tried—you've never attempted in any way—to rid yourself of this incumbrance—to—"

The poor creature! Jose interpreted her placidly.

"What would you have, Maisie?" he answered, shrugging his shoulders after the fashion intended to denote the Canadian accentuated. "I am poor. I am free. I am a son of the rolling grasslands. I never before met any woman in this world who attracted me to submit myself once more to domestic slavery. Yes, I'm free! It's settled in the south. Why restore it in Nebraska? Consider the situation. I was young once, and a fool. In the West, in those days, women were scarce, and poor articles. They sampled very ill. I did the best I could for myself. That best was feeble. You should have seen her, Maisie; a little undersized thing, not taller than your shoulder—oh, yes, a decent enough woman in her way, no doubt; a pretty-faced baby; but not fit for me, for whom the Fates designed a great, glorious, large-limbed ex-ultant Greek goddess. Say you, for example, Maisie." And he darted such a look from his big brown eyes as at her that Maisie trembled and thrilled in her inmost marrow. The poet went on, fingering his mustache with affection. "A small cramped nature as well; not like mine—or yours,—born to roam with the buffalo of my native prairie. A mother of children, good to bake and clean the house. And that, too, for me! Pah! my heart grew sick at it!"

He paused again and eyed her.

"In time," he said slowly, "the nuse came and found me. She found me on the ranche, among the coyotes and the cowboys. Write, Jose, she said. And I rose and obeyed her. I wrote, till the world flocked around me to read. Then I knew what I was and I grew sick of the woman. . . . . She conveniently went mad. . . . . There you have the whole episode."

Maisie gazed at him, eye-struck. It was grand! It was glorious! The bombast imposed upon her. The man's calousness and egotism never impressed her at all. She saw every her own gain in this hideous story.

"And now, Jose," she asked tremulously. "What do you mean to do now? The laws of Nebraska admit incurable lunacy as a good and sufficient cause."

With a snap of his finger the poet once more interrupted her.

"What can I do?" he answered, playing with her as cat plays with a mouse. "I am poor. I am penniless. I get what I make with my pen—the spinings of my own brain, my heart-blood, my life-blood. Out of that I support myself—and the mad woman in Nebraska. How would you have me support yet a third or a fourth? Above all, a Greek goddess, lapped in Washington luxury?"

Maisie's mind was made up. He had said it himself. No one decent should stand between her and the man of her choice. Was he not right, indeed, that her was a lady fit for him? If he could give up his mad wife she could give up all else. They were ties of blood to her now! At all risks she should keep him, her own peerless poet. For his sake she could dare all—the Unspeakable Thing itself. For his sake she could stand any risk, any punishment.

"Good-bye!" she cried, rising to go. "I can't stop here longer again. Episode has been too much for me, at least for the moment. But, Jose, you will have money to spare for this unfortunate incumbrance. And you'll from time to time, if you can, let me know. . . . . I'll see you soon. . . . . I'll try to marry you. . . . . Jose, his inscrutable poet son, ... was aggrieved never a smile once more, he . . . . . to say nothing word. It was his . . . . . to say nothing. Silence never compromised.

As for Maisie, she drove home. . . . . carriage with mamma, reflecting, ... the way that mamma's money . . . . . But alas! there are things that scarcely by frames the heart aid to the mind in words.

Not even to ourselves dare we confess gently our own worst imaginings.

All she knew was just this—at all risks, at all risks, she must and she would marry Jose Mansfield.

CHAPTER IV.

THE FIRST STEP.

At home, all that night, Maisie lay awake in her bed, and thought it all out with herself, and felt sure she understood it. Jose was in love with her. Jose appreciated her. Only once in her life had she met a man worthy of her, and that man had fallen in love with her, as she with him, just as naturally as two mountain torrents meet and unite together. His wife alone stood in the way—his mad wife, and her own mother! If Jose had but money, he could get rid of his wife. If the mother were out of their way, Jose could marry Maisie. They lay her Hind in a nutshell. Jose must have money.

She rose up early, and consulted her accounts. Maisie had always an independent income, for her father was generous to her; in fact she idolized her. Maisie admitted to herself, even then, that she could do as she liked with Mamma. Any way the accounts were satisfactory. Her income was big. She took out her cheque-book and wrote a cheque to Selkor Bonrer for a hundred dollars. For obvious reasons she avoided drawing it in the name of Jose Mansfield. But she enclosed it in an envelope addressed to him at his hotel, and with it she sent a folded sheet of paper bearing the suggestive words: "For preliminary legal expenses. Maisie."

That evening, as usual, she met him again. Oh, how she dreaded it at first! Oh, how she longed for it! But Jose took it as frankly and openly as ever. He had great eyes turned on hers, and they had a long talk. But not a gleam of recognition, of unconscious intimacy was there. That he received her note, she wondered trembling. Well, at any rate, he was not angry. That was at least a relief. He accepted it as it was meant, an interchange of friendly service between two higher natures. Then his talk was more high-flown than ever that evening. He spoke to her in a certain easy rotound flow of speech that passed with him for rhetoric, for poetry, far inferior to the elective affinity that bound great souls together, of the high language of conventional laws that stove in vain to part them.

"Let me not to the marriage of true souls admit impediment," he said after Shakspeare. Maisie took him to mean that he was free to do and intended to apply it in the way she desired him.

Yet it didn't seem sordid—from her to him, not sordid.

For he spoke to her also of the vanity of gold—mere earthly dross that passes, rolled, from hand to hand. Money was not to be nominally yours or mine so we enjoy it equally? What matter who calls himself the owner of some noble estate? "The fancied proprietor owns but the dirt in the ditches," he said, waving his hand "the sky, the air, the distant hills, the snow-clad Sierras—these, these are not his, but yours and mine, Maisie!"

And Maisie thought nobody ever spoke like this, yet nobody ever understand, in language a little more simple than everybody gives to it. It may be truly great is to say or do what the world must reject when it learns it.

She went home again, whirling, as one thing should be done. It was hard to do it, but for Jose's sake! Yet first she must see whether he had taken her money.

Next morning, therefore, very shame-faced she called at her banker's and asked for her account. They brought her the ledger. Her heart rose in her mouth when the cheque was entered! He had cashed it, then, enough. Cashed it the very same day she received it.

She hardly knew whether she was glad of that or not. He accepted so little fortune, and he offered her a lump of clay, she wondered? A little more hesitation, a little more delicacy—but there, it was Jose, and we mustn't judge these great souls by mere standards.

On her way home she called—an unusual call for her—at the Smithsonian institute. The library there she remembered to have noticed a certain book. She took the book down and skimmed several pages. It disheartened her, rather.

Then she went home, all trembling. Mamma was in the drawing-room. General Folger was there with her; old General Folger who had left Congress with Nevermore before last. A widower, mind you, is always dangerous. Besides, Maisie noticed they seemed flurried as she entered. A conscious look alluded to her mother's blind eyes. Maisie grew pale as death. This at least must be prevented! The last affair was added that Maisie was a camel's back. To lose her prospective fortune, and be saddled with a step-daughter! And that when she might have been Jose Mansfield's bride, blessing or not she must brave the Symptoms.

And they were distressing, as a matter of fact, very distressing indeed. She didn't for a moment conceal from herself the knowledge that they wrung her heart terribly. Poor, poor dear Mamma, really fond of poor Mamma—as she understood fondness, she gave her the same sort of pang to have to do it that gives a sensitive person to have to shoot a old horse who has served him well, and to put off the pain from day to day from day to day, for Jose's sake she could do or suffer anything. And she suffered a great deal. At times, heartrending.

Why Astor's Check Was Not Cashed.

A well-known broker presented one of John Jacob Astor's checks at a downtown bank. The teller at first was surprised beyond measure when the paying teller refused to cash it, remarking with a significant smile: "That man's check is no good here. Everything that he owns has all our other depositors put together. We won't touch it."

"What?" he exclaimed the broker, "won't cash that check! Why man alive, do you know who Mr. Astor is? Great—"

"Hold on," interposed the teller, "we know who he is just as well as you do. We know that very day. They are the most troublesome of all our deposits." But the broker had fled.

Every Day is Sunday.

The Greeks observe Monday, says the Baltimore American, the Persians Tuesday, the Assyrians, Wednesday, the Egyptians Thursday, the Turks Friday, the Jews Saturday and the Christians Sunday, thus making the Sabbath being celebrated on earth.

The most famous of ancient houses was the Golden House, created by Nero. Its whole interior is said to have been covered with gold and gems, it was adorned with the finest paintings and statues that the world could furnish, it had triple porticoes a mile in length and a pleasure haunt that which perpetually revolved in imitation of the motion of the sun.

SONGS ARE SUNG.

"Im not for honors he may win
The poet's songs are sung,
The not of fame he lets us in
To worlds in live among.

No law can bind me, no law can wear;
But that for which he loves
Is only that—someone, somewhere,
May come to love his shoes.

—Tom S. Burnett, in New England Magazine.

TO-DAY.

My soul upon my lips hath set a seal,
And tho' I needs must greet thee day by day,
What lies between us I must not reveal—
My life is open in learning to other.

But oh! dear, one, when thou and I shall meet
In that fair world that knows not garish fear,
Unfettered, shall thine longing lips repeat
Evermore, "I loved thee always here."

—M. L. Smith, in Harper's Weekly.

FIGHT WITH A BUFFALO.

A Sailor's Terrible Tussle with an Infuriated Bull.

Americans who remember the buffalo as one of the most majestic and restless of wild beasts forget that he is now confined to Africa that is even a more dangerous foe to meet face to face. What he is like may be seen in the following story, told in the Philadelphia Press, by the first mate of a British merchant vessel. He was bound up the western coast of Africa from Port Natal and Cape Town. The ship, needing repairs, was anchored off Woolloo Island, at the mouth of the river Swakop, where live a few poor natives whose dream of happiness and greatest evil is Mellord rum. Walking game, the teller of this story I got it loose, and then with a feeling of revenge which I can not describe, but with incessantly pain, I drew myself a little more to the right, nearer releasing the hold of my left hand on the bulkhead. Then I pushed the knife almost up to the hilt in the right side of the beast. The next instant I was lying prone on the deck, while the most terrible roar I ever heard was making the forest ring. I had been thrown aside like a bit of cork by the brute, which was charging to and fro and snorting in fear of the agony of pain, while a thin stream of blood ran down and dripped from its muzzle.

To save my life I knew that I must get away, but a terrible pain rending pain in my left leg, and a placid sort of acquiescence in what seemed to be my unavoidable death held me down. In one of his turns the buffalo caught sight of me with his sharp horns. The knife, like my gun, lay ten feet away from me, and I was absolutely helpless. I felt the sharp horns lowered for the attack that would end my existence when I heard a voice—it was Bostwick's, and he seemed to whisper the words, although he asserted afterward that it was a ringing shout—say:

"Keep cool and shut your eyes."

I did as I was bidden, in a dreamy sort of way I closed my eyes; there was the sound of a blow, the sound of voices in my ears, and then I dropped off to sleep.

When I awakened Bostwick and the captain were bending over me; my neck cloth was all wet and clammy where they had been dashing water over me to revive me. I was unable to walk back to the ship, across the river, so four of the ship's crew who were summoned by Captain Warner carried me back.

The rest of the story is soon told. Bostwick had heard my cries and arrived just in time to get an ax to the Cape Buffalo before his final charge on me. I was the cause of that encounter on my right leg for life. Bostwick has been my brother-in-law for two years. He doesn't talk much about that scrape, but when he does he always begins his South African experience by adding:

"I don't see how that bloody brute ever got so far north as the Swakop."

"Neither do I."

A WASTED EFFORT.

The Missionary Could Only Get Them to Say They Would Take the Same.

The tall, thin missionary with a bald head and red nose was impressed with the looks of the two Indians who had been sitting motionless in the sun for three hours, says the Detroit Tribune.

"Here," declared the missionary, "is the very material of useful manhood. It simply needs to be reclaimed by the hand of religion."

With a triumphant and ineffably sweet smile, as if the victory were already his, he turned to the aborigines.

The noble red men opened their eyes, but made no reply.

"Come, ye who weary," urged the missionary.

"Huh!"

The Indians seemed quite contented with their present position. The inducements held out by the bald-headed party with a red nose were not sufficiently powerful to arouse within their breasts any consuming desire for a change.

"Be men!" exclaimed the man of God.

"Huh!"

The denizens of the forest evidently preferred to be Indians. Possibly it was more fun, but they didn't say.

"Before you are two roads," exploded the missionary at last. "The one leads to pain and sickness, the other to salvation and glory."

The Indians looked puzzled.

"Which will you take?" the tall, thin exhorter impressively demanded.

Instantly the Indians upon their feet, their eyes kindling with intelligence. The missionary was almost overcome with delight.

"I say," thundered he in his deepest tones, "which will you take?"

He listened eagerly, rapturously for the reply.

"A little of the same," they cordially declared.

Not about before they knew it the missionary was gone.

RUNNING ON THE SNOW.

AN EXHILARATING SPORT OF THE NORWEGIANS.

Facility With Which Norsemen Equipped With "Ski" Glide Over Drifts and Leap From Precipices Used in the Army.

In Scandinavia, especially in Norway, the snowshoes are of an entirely different construction from what the American is familiar with, and are used as a matter of necessity as well as for pleasurable recreation. At a first glance an American would be customed to the American snowshoe, would unhesitatingly pronounce the newspaper accounts exaggerated. The fact is just the reverse. The shoes, or as they are called the "ski," used in Sweden and Norway, are long, narrow strips of wood three inches or four inches in breadth and eight to twelve feet long, sometimes even longer. They ought to be one inch in thickness at the center under the foot and gradually beveled off to about a quarter of an inch at either end. In front they are narrowed toward and pointed and they are often a little turned up at the back end too. About the center of the "ski" is a loop for the toe made of leather or other suitable substance, and a band which passes from this around behind the heel of the shoe. The object of this fastening is to make the "ski" and the foot as nearly one piece for steering purposes, while the heel is always to rise freely from the "ski" at all times.

There is no reason why any American boy should not be able to make himself a pair of first-class "ski." The material used in Sweden is as good as well as ash, oak, ash, aspen and maple.

Dr. Nansen, the arctic explorer, is a very skillful "ski" runner and an expert on the "ski" of sport. "Of all the sports in Norway," said he, "running on the "ski" is the most national and characteristic, and is practiced in Sweden and in its sister country it holds a position in the very first rank of the sports of the world. There is no form of sport which so evenly develops the muscles, which renders the body so strong and elastic, which teaches so thoroughly the qualities of dexterity and resource."

In the mountain valleys of Sweden and Norway boys and girls are by their parents encouraged from their infancy to their "ski" almost as soon as they can walk. Through the whole long winter till late in the spring the snow is ever present. In many of the valleys there are few roads or ways of any kind, and one and all, men, women and children, alike, whom business takes away from the cottage must travel on their "ski." The boy has scarcely reached the age of breeches before he knows the point of a pair of "ski," what a good lot of wood should look like, etc. Little tots, three or four years of age are often seen struggling with their "ski." To school, miles and miles away for a very considerable length of time.

NORWEGIAN "SKI" CORPS.

PLEASURE TRIP.

The longest race on "ski" was organized by Nordenskiold some years ago in Swedish Lapland. The distance—nearly 140 miles—was covered by the winner in less than twenty-two hours, rests included. A Lapp took the prize, but did not have much time to spare, as the second man, a Lapp forty years old, came in only five seconds later. In a recent race at the great "meet" in Christiania the course was thirty-two miles, laid out over very hilly ground and including all kinds of difficulties calculated to test the competitors corps of soldiers equipped with these snowshoes, the time was 3 hours, 18 minutes.

One great feature of this "ski" sport, that requires both power and grace and skill, is the ability to take long flying leaps. The jumping is done from steep hillsides, with a slope of 40 deg. or more. One man has a record of thirty-nine feet and to have kept his balance when he landed.

Adopted by the Army.

But it is not for sport alone the "ski" is used in Scandinavia. Both in Sweden and Norway the "ski" have been introduced in the army. It has been found that in times of war a corps of soldiers equipped with these "ski" could harass and overwhelm an enemy far easier than if compelled to march the usual way through a snow-covered country where roads are an unknown luxury. These "ski" corps are kept in active practice during the winter season. Mail carriers are all provided with their "ski," and can be seen sliding through the villages with great celerity.

Hunting on "ski" is indulged in as a matter of course. Hare hunting is a favorite amusement in this line, as it involves great speed. No true sportsman in the North kills the hare by shooting, but tries to run it down on his "ski" and knock it over the head with a short club. Reindeer, elk and wolf are also pursued and killed by hunters on their "ski."

There have been some efforts made to introduce these long and slender snowshoes in Canada and Wisconsin, and there appears to be no reason why this sport should not flourish in this country.

DISEASE IN ANIMALS.

Fish Have Cancers and Tumors So Have Birds and Reptiles.

A contemporary states that cancer is reported as being now a frequent appearance in one of the ponds of the Berlin Acclimatization society of New Zealand. American brook trout only have been found to have recovered from suffering from cancer, and these have recovered. The statement that the disease has hitherto been unknown among fish is open to serious doubt. New growths are often found in animals, especially when they have been kept long in confinement. The animals which die in the gardens of the Zoological society are rarely of much use for dissection, as they so commonly suffer from tumors of the bones and viscera.

Such diseases, probably, also occur in a state of nature, but would most likely lead to early death, the animal succumbing in the struggle for existence. In fish myxomatous and sarcomatous tumors have been seen. The fish plague at Berlin has been known from the time of Hunter, as a possible cancer, but it not always, in the adult dense body, it is more metrically disposed on many of its parts. Cancers of birds appear to be the lower animals that are most subject to malignant sarcomatous growths.

Eleven cases of small pox are reported in Akron, Ohio, with one death.

The Grip

Left me in a terribly weak condition; my health nearly wrecked. My appetite was all gone, I was nervous, could not sleep, but tired all the time. Had disagreeable ringing noises in my head, like a waterfall. I also had frequent headaches and severe aching pains in my back. Having heard so much about Hood's Sarsaparilla, I concluded to try it. At the Disagreeable effects of the grip, headache and aches, and believe Hoods Sarsaparilla is the best medicine.

"A correspondent of the Staples World has the following to offer concerning one of Cass county's new commissioners: "W. W. Byant is the same old W. W. as he was before he got to be one of the big men of Cass county. He has fought a hard fight but got there just the same. The last resort was to raise the bonds, but even that would not work."

The Midway News is attempting to boom that portion of St. Paul for the location of the new capitol, and severly denounces the Pioneer Press for editorially opposing its claims. The capitol is essentially a business institution and should be located in the business portion of the city. The site of the present capitol is as good a one as could be selected in St. Paul, and if that city is to retain the capitol the new capitol should be on the old site. If it is to be moved from St. Paul, it should be located in the city nearest to the geographical center of the state, which honor the City of the Pines claims. This would probably be the most sensible thing to do if the needs of the future should be considered, but it is not probable that this will be done, and St. Paul deprived of her honor as the capitol city. But as St. Paul is to have it, by all means have it in the heart or the city, as the offices of any other first class business institution would be.

Got 12,000.

The case of Andrew Mortenson, of this city, against the Northern Pacific railroad was on trial last week when the Dispatch went to press. On Saturday the jury returned a verdict $12,000 for plaintiff. This is the fourth time the case has been tried, the jury disagreeing in all previous trials. Mortenson, it will be remembered, was a brakeman employed by the Northern Pacific, and sustained serious injuries by being knocked from the top of a freight car by a bridge between Fargo and Moorhead. Hon. W. A. Fleming and W. S. Clenahan, of this city and Judge Severance, of St. Paul, were the attorneys for the plaintiff, and T. D. O'Brien and T. R. Selms, of St. Paul, for defendant.

Concerning Our Congressman.

The Washington Correspondent of the Minneapolis Journal has the following to offer:

From present indications Major Baldwin, the Democratic congressman elect from the Fifth Minnesota district, is going to be a prominent figure in the Democratic house during the 53d congress. He has given evidence of more than usual ability since his arrival in Washington last fall. Major Baldwin has a great knack of making friends not only of men who will be his colleagues, but with other prominent officials in the capital city, that will be able to do him a great deal of good when he has to ask for favors, as he will do when he becomes a full-fledged congressman.

Says the Fergus Falls Journal: "Wm. S. Mellen, general manager of the Northern Pacific, is in Washington and his presence in the east is connected with the monetary difficulties of the Northern Pacific. Financial men say that the road has been bankrupted by reckless expenditures and mismanagement. There is general dissatisfaction among the stockholders, who claim that they are deprived of dividends by extravagance of the Northern Pacific managers."

Y. M. C. A. Entertainment.

On the evening of Friday Jan. 13th, a large and expectant throng gathered at the Opera House, ready for a good time, and they were not disapointed. The program consisted of two pieces from each of the choirs, and opening duet by Miss Mabelle and Maude Davis, and numerous recitations from Mr. C. D. Johnson and Nettie Nelson. Altogether it was a pleasing affair, and one long to be remembered by those who had the good fortune to be present. The parts were well rendered and all the participants won the hearty applause of the audience.

The following statement will show the receipts:

Gross receipts	$85.00
Expenses	34.00
	$51.00

An L. F. & D. Wreck.

The Little Falls Daily Transcript of last Friday gives the following account of an accident which happened last [illegible]

The wreck on the Little Falls & Dakota yesterday occurred about a mile east of Sauk Centre, on the Sauk river bridge. It was caused by a broken flange on a wheel of a box car. One freight car and two coaches were thrown from the rails and why they did not roll into the river is a mystery. If they done so a number of passengers would have been killed or injured. As it is, the only person injured was A. V. Carpenter, who had his finger bruised. The wrecking crew, consisting of thirty men from Staples, went out yesterday afternoon and Superintendent Law went up on the Great Northern. Time enough they had succeeded in getting the freight car on the track. An effort is being made to get the coaches up without breaking them to pieces, but it is doubtful if it can be done, as one of them rests on the piling of the bridge, and is liable to fall into the river at any time. Yardmaster Meyers went out last night with a mail car and a coach, so that the train will proceed to Morris as soon as the track is cleared. No. 101 arrived from Brainerd on time this morning, but will wait here until the obstruction is removed, which will probably be this evening.

In Memoriam.

CASTLE HALL, WHITE CROSS LODGE No 20 K. of P.

Brainerd, Minn. Jan. 17th, 1893.

Bro. Knights: Again has death entered our Castle Hall and laid his cold hands upon another of our beloved brothers.

Just as the old year had risen to lay aside his mantle and welcome in the new year the dread messenger came and called from us forever our beloved brother, Charles H. Treglawny, and we bow in humble submission to the Will of our Heavenly Father who doeth all things well.

Our brother has gone but his memory lives. In the death of Bro. Treglawney, this body and the order universal has lost an honored member, the ministry a brilliant, faithful and fearless worker, and the family a respected and loving husband and father.

Let us as a lodge by this sad visitation remember that we to are but mortal, and must soon follow in the foot steps of our beloved brother

May we all be ready when the summons comes, to lay off our cares and to willingly give up the joys of this life for a better and more blessed life hereafter.

To the family of Bro. Treglawney, this lodge extents its sincerest sympathies in this their hour of great affliction.

May an unfaltering trust in God and a risen Christ, and the hope of a resurrection be their comfortand support.

The Master At Arms will see that this Castle Hall is appropriately draped and the keeper of Records and Seal will spread this memorial upon the Records of the lodge, and transmit a copy of the same to the family of the deceased brother, and also copies to the city press.

E. G. SANDERSON,
Chancellor Commander.

A Good Word

Uttered in praise of an action that is worthy, or of an article that has real merit, is only what is due. From out of the busy hum and roar of this large iron manufacturing town of Sharpsburg, Pa., comes the following tribute penned by a lady to a leading druggist of that place N. McFadden.

Mr. J. J. Keil,

Sharpsburg, Pa.,

DEAR SIR:—I am glad to say a good word for Krause's Headache Capsules. After suffering for over three years with acute neuralgia and its consequent insomnia, (which seemed to baffle the efforts of some of our best physicians) you suggested this remedy which gave me almost instant relief. Words fail to express the praise I should like to bestow on Krause's Headache Capsules.

Gratefully yours,
MRS. E. R. HOLLES.

Horses, cows, ponies, wagons, buggies and harnesses for sale on time at Hoffman's

Platform.

One of the best illustrations of "anything to get the coon" was a story of the late campaign. A Republican senator from a "free silver state" was asked how he could stand on the platform of his party, as it did not favor his monetary ideas. "Well, its about this way. A friend of mine on a pleasant summer day boarded a railway train. As he intended to ride only about five miles, he remained on the car platform, enjoying the scenery and the breeze. Soon the brakeman approached—'Please get inside the car sir.' 'But it's more pleasant out here.' 'Orders is—passengers not allowed to stand on the platform.' 'Well, what's a platform for, if not to stand on?' 'What's a platform for? It's not to stand on, sir, but to get in on.' 'You see,' said the senator, 'why I don't care about the anti-silver plank—it's only to get in on.' That may do very well for some politicians, but the Burlington stands on, and stands by, the planks of its platform, which are: Best Equipment Fast Time. Smoothest tracks. Absolute Safety. Have Connections Courtesy to Passengers. Special Attention to ladies traveling alone, or in charge of children. Goes everywhere. Procrastination is the Thief of Time.

We offer to the public in the cunin COUGH CURE a most excellent cough remedy, both as a preventive, and cure if taken in time or when first symptoms appear. It never fails to prevent and break up that which otherwise might result in a severe spell of sickness. It is a preventive being so quick and certain in its action. All other cough mixtures, except Cobeb Cough Cure, require from twelve to twenty-four hours time in bringing about a result, or inducing nature to free itself from the attack. Cubeb Cough Cure should always be used. It can be relied upon, as it certain and never fails. Being quick and certain in its action it stops all tendency to pulmonary troubles and prevents Pneumonia.

Time is worth everything. Delays are dangerous. No one can afford to run the risk of allowing a cough to develop into Pneumonia, which is nearly always fatal. Cubeb Cough Cure is the only remedy that can be relied on to give quick relief and cures the cold. It will afford relief in one minute, and for that reason has won the title The Sixty Second Remedy. Cubeb Cough Cure is very pleasant to the taste, is desirable especially where children are required to take medicine. Sold by N. McFadden.

The St. Paul Globe And Cleveland.

Now that the Democratic party, by the vote of a large majority of the American people, has been placed in possession of all branches of the national government,

YOU WILL WANT
THE ST. PAUL GLOBE

As a regular visitor in your home.

It will give you the news of the world.

It will give you the markets of the world.

It will give you the doings of congress.

It will give you the doings of your own state legislature.

It will keep you informed upon the acts of the administration of President Cleveland, as well as the acts of the Republican state administration.

It will discuss, intelligently and impartially, questions of legislation and administration in both state and nation—giving especial attention to questions of taxation, finance, free wheat markets and those things in which you are most deeply interested.

You also want the GLOBE's great Geographical and Political Map, to hang up in your house or office. No intelligent family will want to be without the GLOBE or its Map.

Price of either the WEEKLY GLOBE one year or the Map, $1. Both taken together, $1.50.
