THE Northern Pacific company is settling its Dutch Dakota delinquent taxes for 50 cents on the dollar.

MELROSE people are feeling better since J. J. Hill has announced that the division headquarters of the Great Northern road will not be removed from that place.

THE Graceland Enterprise is a new publication received at this office. Graceland is situated in Hubbard county on the proposed extention of the Brainerd & Northern Minnesota road, 24 miles above Walker.

THE new woman is in her element in Maryland, a test case having been decided in the Baltimore courts to the effect that a woman may wear men's clothing provided no offense is committed against public modesty.

INFORMATION comes from Fosston that supplies have already begun to reach there addressed to Foley Bros. The people in Fosston and vicinity take this as an indication that the contractors are about to begin the extension of the Fosston branch of the Great Northern to Duluth, says the News Tribune.

THE Chicago city council has passed an ordinance placing a yearly tax on bicycles of $1 and on one-horse wagons $2, two-horse, $3, and on up to $12 for eight-horse vehicles. The city expects to raise one million dollars by this means and will expend it all on the streets. There are 300,000 bicycles in that city.

A CITY official at Lowell, Mass., was bribed by three men for a municipal franchise and the four are now behind the bars serving a year's sentence in prison besides paying a fine of $500. Minneapolis might profit by sending a delegation to Lowell to find out how they manage to convict men on charges of that kind.

THE supreme court has rendered a decision declaring the peddler's license law which was passed by the last legislature to be unconstitutional. It is held by the court that peddling is a legitimate business and only in cases where it becomes a nuisance can it be regulated. The country merchants were the one most interested in the passage of the law.

A TERRIBLE calamity was averted at Cloquet recently according to the Pine Tree Record and what looked like a baseless Fourth was made glorious by the timely arrival of several cars of the amber fluid. When it was known that the washouts had cut of the arrival of the liquid that was expected in that city, nearly every citizen went into mourning but an enterprising Duluth firm came to their rescue and now the public there worship the beer agent that delivered them from a dry Fourth.

THE Brainerd Journal endeavors to make political capital out of the fact that President McKinley has removed C. F. McDonald from the receivership of the St. Cloud land office, and appointed a Republican to the position. The charge, of course, will mean that the land notices will hereafter be published in Republican newspapers, and, of course, a great deal of Bro. Stivers' wail can be attributed to this fact. McDonald claims that "Comrade McKinley" should have kept him in office because they fought together. On that score "Comrade McDonald" evidently forgets the campaign of last fall and the hard names he applied to the man who he now thinks should keep him at the public crib.

To Cut Down and Dead Timber.

The plan prepared by Land Commissioner Hermann for disposing of the dead timber on the Leech Lake and Chippewa reservations in Minnesota, has been made public, and is a modification of what is known as the Mescomine plan. In the first place the commissioner proposes to appoint one man as superintendent of all such work, to have charge of all branches. He then proposes to have a white cook with each party of loggers, who will account strictly for every pound of provisions consumed. He also contemplates the appointment of white teamsters who will look out for all logs cut and account for them, and in order that the Indians will not yield to temptation and cut live timber, he proposes to have each piece marked and only marked logs cut by Indians.

They Stay in Prison.

A pardon for the Youngers was refused by the state board of pardons on Monday and a more wise action could not have been taken. The Minneapolis Times very aptly states the case when it says in the above connection:

The last robber in the bank at Northfield deliberately fired the death bullet into the brain of the prostrate and unconscious cashier. No more dastardly, unnecessary deliberate and unpardonable murder was ever committed. Who committed that wanton and brutal crime? The Youngers know who did it. But they have persisted in shielding the monstrous wretch for more than twenty years, and still refuse to disclose his name. And yet, while obstinately continuing to shield this monstrous wretch they have the effrontery to declare that they are thoroughly reformed and prepared to lead honest careers and on that plea ask for pardon and liberty. Good citizens do not deliberately shield outrageous criminals and conspire to defeat the ends of justice. Respect for law and terror of its penalties will be increased by leaving those unrepentant and defiant criminals where they are. If they are so merciful for their bloody past let them evince the fact by divulging the name of the unhanged villain who shot poor Heywood through the brain as he lay prone and senseless upon the ground. But to ask pardon for themselves while protecting the perpetrator of as foul a murder as was ever committed, is the very climax of impudence.

A refunding order for $1.75 was ordered issued in favor of F. L. McClellan on account of erroneous assessment. The following resolution was on motion adopted:

WHEREAS, the taxes upon real estate delinquent for the year 1897 and prior years, in Crow Wing County, Minnesota, which have not been satisfied by payment, redemption or sale to actual purchasers and excepting such taxes the enforcement of which is now barred by the statute of limitations, exceeds thirty mills on the dollar of the total assessment or assessed valuation of real estate of this county for the year 1896;

Therefore be it Resolved by this Board that the provisions of Chapter 230 of the General Laws of 1897 of said State applies to, and is hereby applied to this county.

Report of overseer of poor farm for the months of April, May and June was on motion accepted and placed on file.

Report of committee appointed to survey the Pine River road was accepted and placed on file.

Report of the city clerk, including check for $42.60 for fines collected during months of April, May and June, was received and auditor instructed to issue an order for $31.90 in favor of city of Brainerd for court fees.

The following grand and petit jurors were selected to replace those who served in March term:

"I DID NOT STOP TO THINK

It only was one careless word,
And spoken with no ill intent,
The mother's face turned pale and paled
I had occasion to lament.

'Twas something I could not recall,
It set a pattern all ablaze,
It turned a kindly heart to gall,
And made mine stop from simple shame.

It changed a current of a life,
It turned me back from fortune's brink—
That little careless word I utter—
Because "I did not stop to think."

I thought of judgment he had lack,
And yet I "speaked" without out of school."
Before the word I could take back,
He said, "You think I am a fool."

"Think twice before you speak." Ah, true
I learn the adage well, and yet
Not fifty words can e'er construe
That one or stop a rash regret.

A Cause of Epilepsy.

A number of physicians have for some time been studying eye troubles as a cause of epilepsy. It would seem that the relation between cause and effect is so perfect that not a doubt remains that the eyes are not only physically but mentally unbalanced by lack of attention to the eyes. The proportion of defective eyes in children is very striking. More than half of the school children of the country have more or less trouble of this nature. A case which presents many very peculiar symptoms was noted. A youth had epileptic attacks and was put in charge of various specialists, who finally decided that the boy must have received an injury to his skull and was suffering from depression. He had always complained of headaches, and his family were and had been for many years victims to most depressing attacks of this nature. A critical examination failed to show anything wrong with the skull. It was at length decided to test the patient's eyes for the result of this was a prescription for glasses, which at once removed the convulsions and restored him to health. This occurred some years ago, and there has been no return whatever of the trouble. A young girl had suffered with epileptic convulsions until her mind was seriously affected. Glasses constantly worn gave immediate relief, and up to date there have been no more convulsions.—New York Leader.

The managers of the Rochester base ball club have issued orders excluding clergymen from the Sunday games on the ground that their presence tends to create disorder. The fact, of course, is that the clergymen who have attended Sunday games were in no sense of the word disorderly. But they made their visit the basis of sermons condemning Sunday base ball, and the managers of the club did not like that.

The Philadelphia mint has gone into the business of coining money for foreign countries. According to a recent statement of the mint during the month of May, 60,017 "silver-dollar pieces were struck off for Costa Rica, in view of the recent adoption of that as a standard. The value of these pieces is estimated at $279,291.31. The total face value of the coinage of the United States for the month was in gold, $4,489,950, and in silver $1,600,000. Of this latter sum $200,000 was subsidiary coin.

The reckless way in which proper names and personal affairs are mentioned and discussed in public places brings shame to every self-respecting citizen, and is at least one instance resulted in a merited rebuke. In a Chicago street car not long ago a man who had heard with manifest annoyance the conversation of some persons opposite, leaned over and attracted the attention of one of the speakers said, in a cool and distinct voice, "I beg your pardon, but you have been discussing the private affairs of my son and his family for the benefit of this car. I wish to tell you that, aside from its being such an ill-bred thing to do, there is not a word of truth in anything you have said about them, and you will oblige me much if you would let the affairs of my family alone in the future." We hope that the chagrin of the situation worked reformation in the habits of at least two occupants of that car.

The Chinese government is slowly but surely pushing forward the railway from Tientsin to Peking, and it is expected that in June the traveler on other "foreign devil" will be able to go by rail from the seashore to the gates of the mysterious capital. This will add about 90 miles to the 124 miles of road from Tientsin to the Kaiping coal mines, which now constitutes the railway system of China. The spell of prejudice has been broken, and several other railway enterprises are now on foot. The chief of these, a great trunk line from Peking southwesterly to Hankow on the coast, a distance of about 1,000 miles, has already been started, with a small government subsidy, but its rapid construction is not to be expected. A short road from Shanghai to Woosung is also in progress. It may be well, however, to accelerate many inquiries by assuring our readers that there is not at present, nor is there likely to be for a long time to come, any demand for Ameri can railway men in China.

One of the most unique suits ever filed has been entered in Kansas City. Miss Ellen Phillipps asks the city for $75,000 as damages because, she says, the proprietors of the Boston store, in which she was a clerk, compelled her to stand when it was necessary, and the city did not step in and interfere. The personal affairs of the state law calls for the appointment of a city health officer to look after cases such as this, but that the city has never complied with the law. Ex-County Surveyor Fred Davis of Duluth, who was defendant in a judgment obtained by the city for the extraordinary grand jury in January, charging the Bishop of Duluth and the Chicago, Milwaukee, Toledo, Buffalo and other lake cities, with the same. The plan is to open temporary recruiting offices in the principal cities of the east as many of the lake ports are possible. The project is to be credited to Lieut. Hawley. When the department came to realize the fact that not a single vessel in the naval service had a full complement of ordinary seamen and sailors, and that many of the high standard desired by the navy could not be procured in sufficient numbers in the east cities, his plan was adopted and he was put in charge of its execution.

THE CURRENCY MESSAGE.

The Cabinet Again Has the Matter Under Consideration.

Washington, July 10.—The main topic of discussion before the cabinet at the regular meeting was the message on the subject of the currency question, which has been withheld for a few days in deference to the wishes of many prominent Republicans. After considering all of the objections that had been made against the presentation of the message at the present session of congress, the president and his advisers were still of the opinion that in order to redeem the party promises on the subject of currency legislation it be treated in a message recommending the creation of a special non-partisan commission, and unless there is another change in the plans of the president he will send the message to congress next Monday.

PRESIDENTIAL OUTING.

His party will consist of the members of the presidential family, of Vice President and Mrs. Hobart, Secretary Alger and family, Secretary and Mrs. Porter, and probably several other members of official society. The president will make quite a prolonged stay, lasting several weeks at least.

PLEAD FOR PARDON

FRIENDS OF THE YOUNGERS APPEAR BEFORE THE BOARD OF PARDONS.

Strong Arguments Presented in Their Behalf by Warden Walker, State Officials and Prominent Men and Others—Protests and Arguments in Opposition to the Pardon Presented by Citizens of Northfield.

St. Paul, July 13. — The Minnesota board of pardons heard arguments on the petition for the pardons of the Younger brothers, serving life terms for the Northfield bank robbery, and then continued the case until 9 o'clock in the morning. The first two hours were occupied by the presentation of the claims for clemency and a 4 o'clock the representation of the Northfield people were heard in opposition to the pardon, and they had not finished at the hour of adjournment.

Both sides were strongly championed. Among those in favor of the application were every member of the board of prison managers, Warden Walker, State Auditor Dunn, ex-Sheriff Barton of Morristown, who had charge of the Youngers after their arrest, Thomas Leyhed of Faribault, a member of the pardon board, Judge McCafferty of St. Paul, who made the chief address in their behalf. Those opposed were Mayor Ames of Northfield and the county of Rice in opposition to the pardon were Mr. Wheelwright of St. Paul, Mayor F. H. Noble, C. F. Carpenter, Prof. Goodhue and Attorney F. F. Kelly of Northfield and Mayor A. D. Keyes of Faribault, County Attorney A. L. Keyes of Faribault and W. R. Estes of Madelia.

The hearing was attended to the extreme. About fifty people were crowded in the governor's room, and they listened intently to what was said. Both sides were thoroughly in earnest. The warden and the members of the board of prison managers were convinced that the Youngers should be released from the penitentiary of the Minnesota community and society in general would not suffer by the act, by reason of it. They believed that the prisoners had earned the right to freedom, and that it was the duty of the board of pardons to give it to them. The opposition was just as strong and convinced that the pardon would be a grave mistake and that it would have a very pernicious effect on society and bring the law into disrepute in the state. The idea of rewarding the criminals was never meant to have any application to the Younger boys, they averred. They had by their conduct felted their lives to the state and it was satisfactory to the citizens that they were allowed merely to live.

DAMAGE AT ANOKA.

Two Nearly Finished and Several Bridges Washed Out.

Anoka, Minn., July 13.—A hundred feet or more of the coffer dam on the east end of the bridge was washed out yesterday, and the dam lost fifty feet of the apron and bridge. The damage will be working in a large wannigan, but could not save it, having barely time to save a wagon load. The damage will be over $5,000. The sudden lowering of the river snapped the booms of Reed & Sherwood and let 1,500,000 feet of logs loose, but they were quickly regulated. The Omaha bridge cost over $50,000 feet, which went over the dam, and it will be some time before it is traffic. Faherty's bridge has been damaged.

To Employ 500 Men.

Elroy, Wis., July 13.—The contractors who will straighten the Omaha road between this city and Kendall Dowgins are beginning work. About 500 men will soon be employed. The work, the operation in some places will be thirty feet in depth. The line will be changed in a few weeks. The danger from fast running will be lessened by the elimination of the curves

WESTERNERS FOR THE NAVY.

Temporary Recruiting Offices to Be Opened at Lake Ports.

Washington, July 10.—The navy department is about to undertake to get more Western blood in the navy, and to that end Lieut. J. M. Hawley, with a surgeon and a boatswain, will start from Washington next week on a tour of the larger Western cities with a view to securing recruits. The first stop will be made at Detroit and then Chicago, Milwaukee, Toledo, Buffalo and other lake cities will be visited. The plan is to open temporary recruiting offices in the principal cities of the east as many of the lake ports are possible. The project is to be credited to Lieut. Hawley. When the department came to realize the fact that not a single vessel in the naval service had a full complement of ordinary seamen and sailors, and that many of the high standard desired by the navy could not be procured in sufficient numbers in the east cities, his plan was adopted and he was put in charge of its execution.

THE CURRENCY MESSAGE.

The Cabinet Again Has the Matter Under Consideration.

Washington, July 10.—The main topic of discussion before the cabinet at the regular meeting was the message on the subject of the currency question, which has been withheld for a few days in deference to the wishes of many prominent Republicans. After considering all of the objections that had been made against the presentation of the message at the present session of congress, the president and his advisers were still of the opinion that in order to redeem the party promises on the subject of currency legislation it be treated in a message recommending the creation of a special non-partisan commission, and unless there is another change in the plans of the president he will send the message to congress next Monday.

PRESIDENTIAL OUTING.

McKinley's Vacation to Be Spent at Lake Champlain.

The president will make quite a prolonged stay, lasting several weeks at least.

THE CUBAN GOVERNMENT.

Dr. Danforth Gives the Senate Committee Information Regarding It.

Milwaukee, Wis., July 13.—Dr. Henry W. Danforth, who for the past year has been physician to the Cuban president, has returned from Washington, where he has been testifying before the senate committee on foreign relations.

"The object of the committee seemed to be to ascertain whether the Cubans really had a seat of government," said Mr. Danforth. "I think I satisfied the members that the insurgents had one. Geographically Cuba is a large representative government, too. The president, Salvadore Cisneros; Gen. Maceo, who is the chief of the army; Gen. Perez Pena; Mr. Portuondo, the secretary of foreign affairs, and Dr. Cassanova, the secretary of the interior, are all here. Cuba has officials and actually in service. The capital is Aguera, about three leagues to the west of the city of Guaymaro, in the eastern part of the Province of Principe. The country is almost entirely devastated. In the Province of Principe one can purchase considerable cattle but no vegetables. Cuba is a country that can raise enough but plenty of vegetables. In Pinar del Rio there is sufficient land and labor for home consumption, but in Havana and Matanzas it is not. Weyler has left the committee at Washington that he told me that it was the first who had given him a correct information regarding the Cubans' seat of government."

How America Was Named.

Vespucci himself must not be held responsible for the christening. The unconscious crim'nal was a certain Martin Waldseemuller of Pilbsang, an eminent cosmographer of Lunéville, Lieue, duke of Lorraine. The duke probably showed a letter of Vespucci's to his geographical friend, who incorporated its contents with the result he was heading under the assumed name of "Hylacomylus," and as these publications had a wide circulation, the use of the name America thus became propagated throughout the world.—Scribner's.

"RUN OVER."

Curses stood under the shade of a huge tree in a little garden, strong, erect, defiant; the other drooping, timid, pleading. It was a repetition of the old story—the true lovers torn asunder by a cruel fate, a parting and vows of constancy and faithful love.

The man, Rodney Kirke, was a fine looking young fellow of twenty-eight who had been from infancy the ward and darling of his uncle, James Kirke, believing himself to be the heir to a certain heir of that gentleman and ever his dutiful nephew from true, earnest love and gratitude. His life had been a shadowed one, having little brightness, for his uncle for thirty years had been an invalid—sometimes well enough to move about in his own extensive grounds, but often, for months together, confined to his room and bedsuffering inlensely.

When Rodney left school and would have studied a profession or entered some business career, his uncle kept him bound to his chair, letting all the management of his large estate fall gradually into his hands, and taking infinite comfort from his gentle care when he was suffering.

It was a strange, grey life for youth, and Rodney fretted sometimes at merging his own existence into that of the invalid, but never complained, his uncle used at such times was a powerful one.

"When I die this whole property will be yours, and you must care for it and manage it, and I shall never be happy for you to undertake any other business."

It was content, therefore, to let his life narrow to the limits his uncle dictated, until, about two years before the date when this story opens, Rodney Kirke, it was all like a whirling dream to the young man to recall how the handsome widow took possession of his uncle, flattered him, petted him, coaxed him, and married him.

The return to Ferndale, James Kirke's home, was a wedding trip, and from that hour every effort was made by the bride to thrust Rodney out of his place in his uncle's heart and home. Misrepresentations were made, and at first had some effect. Keeping him out of his uncle's room, Mrs. Kirke made the old gentleman believe his absence was from voluntary neglect. At last a tangible cause of complaint was found, when Rodney, sad and miserable, fell in love with Bella Green, whose father—horror of horrors! kept a small drinking saloon, and whose mother was vulgarity personified. The girl herself had been educated in a good seminary, and came home to find all her surroundings revolting to a delicate, sensitive nature, refined by study and associations with companions above her in the social scale.

She was wonderfully pretty, considering her parentage, and even Mrs. Rodney's deepest sympathies were roused by her miserable home life. That he met her in the shady lanes and woods was from no desire for concealment, but simply because her home was so noisy, ill-ordered and vulgar that there was no place for quiet or conversation.

The story of this "low association" was so told to James Kirke that he was furious with anger, and this, added to a little more stimulated to Rodney, so roused him that the young man had put before him the choice of giving up his love at once and forever or leaving his home. He was young, and a sensitive heart, which a life of seclusion had made still more romantic, was aroused, and Rodney refused submission to his uncle for the first time.

And so, under the great tree in Sam Green's garden, he was taking leave of the girl for whose sake he was leaving luxury and hope, to face a world whose bitterness he had never tasted.

"You will be true to me, Bella?" he said, as he pressed a final kiss upon her tear-stained face.

"I will wait for you if it is for twenty years," she said, clinging to him.

And, keeping that promise for comfort, Rodney Kirke left Ferndale to try to find employment in London, a large manufacturing town ten miles distant, where his uncle owned property. And every face that smiled upon him for years was turned away; every door that had opened to him was closed. His uncle would have been stood by his wife, kept him from even the lowest position, and he suffered from positive starvation more than once in the first three months of his exile. The bitter regrets for the easy obedience to his uncle's wishes that had entailed upon him preparation for a life of self-support, were unavailing, and there came a winter night when he stood in the streets, homeless and penniless and battling the temptation to defy even his Creator by suicide.

Suddenly he roused himself from such bitter reverie and walked rapidly until he reached a handsome house where a tin sign announced to all comers that "Dr. Bedlowe" lived within. He was a man of some fame, and Rodney Kirke entered, and rose at once to give him a most cordial greeting.

"The very opportune for asking a favor," the young man said, gratefully. "Old friends have not cared to see me of late."

"Anything I can do for you is done," said the doctor, cordially. "I think, Rodney, your old friends do not understand, as I do, how foully you have been wronged. Knowing everything, I have scarcely felt my influence with your uncle in your favor, but so far in vain. Now tell me, what can I do for you?"

"Doctor, I am starving! I will not beg. I can not work without some experience, but there is one position I am fit for. Long ago, you said, you were bitterness of your life, St. Then ing—what is it—that I could suggest, must earn the bread, or rate, though he thankfully accepted the doctor's proposition to make the position a stepping stone for the study of medicine and surgery. It were far too long a story to record all the trials of the next two years. Faithful in the discharge of every duty, the nurse found time for study under Dr. Bedlowe's advice, and put in every dollar not needed for actual existence toward the expense of a medical education. He was amazed himself at the enthusiasm that stirred roused, and the doctor encouraged him warmly, seeing clearly how he would be fitted for his profession. But over the new hopes there hung a heavy cloud. Six months after he left Ferndale, his letters to Bella remained unanswered so long that he went to seek her, to find the store in new hands and the family gone.

Shocked, anxious and bewildered as he was, he did not lose his faith. When he could offer her a home he would seek Bella and find her true to him. News from home came to him from Dr. Bedlowe. He was kept informed of the rapid changes—the first that Ralph Olney had taken his place in his uncle's affections and in his uncle's devoted stepson. Later, Mrs. Kirke died, but Rodney's letters to his uncle were returned, and he was not allowed in a curt note that Ralph Olney would be his uncle's heir, as he was his "devoted son."

"Your uncle is completely under that young man's control," Dr. Bedlowe said, "and he seems to be a man who excites him to a perfect fury of rage. Trust me to do all I can for you!"

And Rodney strengthened in hope of reconciliation, Rodney only studied more diligently, and gave more faithful attention to every opportunity to advance his practical knowledge.

He was in his own room, a tiny cell of a place on the roof of the house, when a stroke upon the bell over his head warned him that a message was waiting on the way to his care. Instantly he was on the alert, and moved to the invalid, that he might be near the patient. Cool, self-possessed, but tender for all suffering, he had been the helpful one from the stretcher to the bed, but his very heart seemed to cease he heard the voice fall upon the pallid face of Ralph Olney.

"Run over!" the men said who had carried him. "Ain't more dead than dead since we picked him up. Not dead, is he?"

No! He was not dead, but frightfully injured, and the doctors who clustered about the bed shook their heads ominously. It was strongly impressed upon Rodney that the life of the patient hung upon a thread, the strange and which were beyond comprehension of his watchfulness and strict obedience to orders, and then he was left to watch under Providence he held in his hands the life of his enemy—of the man who had supplanted him, maligned him, injured him in every way, and had thought the worst shock was over, until, an hour later, one of the physicians met Dr. Bedlowe—entered the room, followed by a shrieking, sobbing woman, who sank upon her knees beside the patient, whispering:

"Oh, Ralph, speak to me! My husband, my dear husband!"

And the weeping wife was Bella. Was it strange that Rodney Kirke thought he was still in a dream—some hideous nightmare pressing upon his brain? He moved to leave them together, but Bella caught his hand and in broken, sobbing sentences implored him to forgive her—to be kind to Ralph and save his life for her sake and her child. It was pitiful to see her, to hear the story of the wife of Ralph Olney, who James Kirke, who was ignorant of the marriage of his stepson. But at last, when the night was almost over, the story was told, and the new hope in his place had struck home to him. Even a stranger was stirred by the scorn he felt.

But there opened before his mind a secret of power unknown to his uncle. His rival's life depended on his skill and his inheritance upon his science. His uncle had written to Ralph that his man would be his heir; probably he had long before made his will and carried out his plan. Yet, if he died, Rodney was his heir at law, and Bella's falsehood removed the only cause of difference between the cousins. Let the case.

Days passed, and as if he had been his treasured friend, Rodney Kirke nursed Ralph Olney back to life. He had fought back all selfish consideration, and left the results to make all his own and his boy to take possession of his own fitting greater part of his life. Ten years after Dr. Kirke, a man already in the prime of manhood, was sitting in his office alone, when his old friend, Dr. Bedlowe, came in, his face full of grave joy.

"At last!" he said. "At last, I may congratulate you. But I must tell my story first. Before you left your child, Rodney, he gave me his solemn promise to right the wrong he had done you. Ralph Olney was not a man who, having inherited a fair income from his father, but he was grasping, selfish and unscrupulous, and determined to make him into your care, and that left him crippled and imbecile. When your uncle died, I thought Ralph Olney had promised to make in your favor was one of the unaccomplished acts dying men so often leave until too late. Year to-day, only to-day, Mrs. Olney came to my office with the will, which she found a week ago, giving her husband, Rodney, you must pity and forgive her. Such a heart-broken face I have never seen. Five children—the eldest a boy—and her husband is only a wearing source of grief and care. In this last hour she has recovered all their personal possessions from Ferndale, and she asks of you only that you will not seek her. Let her see no home or no thank her. She was fearful that pride or some mistaken chivalry might lead you to refuse what she called her atonement, and so brought the will to me. Your old home awaits you! May you be very happy there!"

Unkindly Chatter.

"May I borrow your umbrella for five minutes?" "Why don't you use the one you borrowed last week?" "I'm keeping that to lean on you." "Well, I'll be over in five minutes and get it." "Then you won't let me take yours?" "Yes, take it along. I'm tired of you ahead of you."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

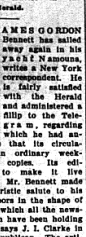
FACTS REGARDING NEW YORK JOURNALISM.

Justly Fight for Supremacy Between the World and Journal—Editor Bennett Gives Advice in the Columns of the Herald.



JAMES GORDON Bennett has thrown away again in his yacht Namouna, and the journalists of New York are crying for a new proprietor. It is considered that France has the stupendous national debt of $6,000,000,000, the largest ever incurred by any nation of the world.

The Only Man on His Side.

A certain bridge, popular enough, but with a slight tendency to inescibility was holding court. One of the judge's favorite lines is to get let othe details of a case in a thorough manner and explain matters at length to the jury. Another of his peculiarities is that members of that body are not capable of understanding for themselves. I

The case in point had been treated correctly by the judge, who, as he thought, had put it so clearly that a verdict could not be given at once, and the jury retired to consider the fact found it necessary to leave their seats in the one jury room and when they did not return, he finally sent in word inquiring what the trouble was. The foreman of the jury was standing out against the other eleven agreed that the plaintiff was entitled to the fore him and rebuked the recalcitrant. That may be correct.

"Yes, you may!" cried the judge.

Then he goes to work with a crowbar and sledgehammer and drives the stump, filling them with oxen or mules, or hogs, or whatever he has handy, and the animals are made to pull the stump out of the hole. The hogs have so rooted the dirt from the stump that it is an easy job for a few men and take it away.—Kennebec Journal.

Feeds the Mississippi.

According to calculations of John Richelieu, of Philadelphia, the drainage area of the Mississippi river is one and one-fourth millions of square miles, including nearly the all of the country from the Alleghanies to the Rockies and from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico. In his communication to the Engineers' club, Mr. Birkenbine estimates that one inch of rainfall, evenly divided over this area would equal 22,780,000,000,000 cubic feet of water. The average yearly fall in the Mississippi watershed averages from twenty to forty-three inches according to locality. The river has an average flow of 664,000 cubic feet per second.

To Amateur Photographers.

All young men of this city who are interested in amateur photography should now avail themselves of the splendid opportunity afforded them and become members of the Y. M. C. A. Camera Club. By so doing they will have a most excellent opportunity of becoming enlightened in the mysteries of this most fascinating art. Arrangements have been made for free lessons in developing, etc., to be given on Friday evenings of each week at the rooms of the club in the Y. M. C. A. building. Several events particularly interesting to lovers of the art also by stated, one of which will be a picture fair to be held in October, and prizes will probably be awarded for the best work. We cordially invite those interested to join our ranks. Yours truly,

H. L. CASEY, Pres.

To Beautify the City.

On Tuesday evening a meeting was held at the Y. M. C. A. for the purpose of organizing a society that would agitate the movement of keeping the streets of the city clean. Dr. A. F. Groves, who issued the call, presided and in calling the meeting to order made a few very pertinent remarks as to the objects, stating that the rubbish thrown into the streets in front of residences and in all parts of the city made it hazardous for bicycle riders and also for horses. While there were ordinances prohibiting such a state of affairs he believed that more good would result in educating the public, and thought if a society was organized and a concerted effort made, the evil would be remedied. E. M. Wastfall, A. L. Hoffman and others spoke on the same line of thought and it was decided to call the organization the Brainerd Improvement Society. The membership roll was signed by those present who desired to join in the movement and after electing A. F. Groves temporary chairman and A. L. Hoffman temporary secretary and asking the aid of the press of the city in bringing the matter before the public the meeting adjourned subject to the call of the chairman.

MARRIED.

On Wednesday afternoon Rev. Fr. Zumbusch, of Staples, united Geo. Morin and Miss Emma Norton in marriage at St. Francis Catholic church in this city. In the evening the occasion was followed by a dance and banquet at A. Armstrong's hotel on Front street.

Former Brainerdite Marries.

The Pioneer Press, of Thursday last, contains the following notice of the wedding of a gentleman well known in this city and who resided here for some years:

A fashionable marriage was celebrated today in the Episcopal church, Rev. W. H. Knowlton performed the ceremony. The bride was Miss Harriet W. Beecher, daughter of Mr. F. E. Beecher, formerly of Ft. Dodge, Iowa. The bridegroom was C. E. Dickinson, of the firm of F. W. Philbrick & Co. and formerly of Brainerd. The church was elaborately decorated with cut flowers and ferns and crowded with friends of the two families. The young couple left immediately for Dowagiac, Mich., the early home of the bridegroom, where part of the honeymoon will be spent.

To Be Repeated.

Miss Mamie Gilbert, the talented elocutionist, gave an entertainment at the First Congregational church on Tuesday evening, and although the rain caused a number to remain at home, the church was comfortably well filled. Miss Gilbert is certainly a very pleasing and entertaining lady, and her programme was listened to attentively and appreciated by those present. In order to give all a chance to hear her it has been decided to repeat the entertainment this (Friday) evening at the same place with an entire change of programme. The lady will be assisted by the best local musical talent in the city, and although it will be well worth the price of admission, which has been placed at the low price of 20 cents for adults and 10 cents for children.

Dainty Lingerie.

Ribbon play an important part in dainty undergarments, and are run through or under insertions and tied bows wherever possible. Fronts of Empire gowns are sometimes tucked down for three or four inches from the throat in very fine tucks, whence the fullness is unconfined, and below the tucks are crossings in bands of insertion put on straight or in Vandykes. The shoulderollars are usually pointed into yokes in front, well over the bust and even to the waist line. The backs of the Empire gowns are laid in box-plaits the depth of the yoke, and sometimes tucked to the waist. The embroideries used are of fine lace-like patterns, and they are put on as gathered ruffles or frills, not in straight edgings.

The very daintiest corset-covers are marvels of fine needlework, often being made entirely of rows of insertion between bands of fine cambric or nainsook or silk. Fine embroidered beading heads most ruffles, whether of lace or embroidery, and is used in almost all joinings, between bands of tucks and insertion, and on all edges; often all the seams of silk petticoats, garments, room-gowns, and matinees, are put together with it.—From "Review of Fashions," in Demorest's Magazine for August.

The Extract Vint m.

Indian Agt. Scott has just returned from a trip over the reservation, where he made an examination of the Indians who lost their eyesight through drinking extract of peppermint and lemon at Mille Lacs. He is of the opinion that they can be cured. Arrangements have been made to have one of the Indians put in doctor's care. If a cure is effected in his case, the others affected will receive treatment. The test case will be conducted under the direction of Captain Scott and at the government's expense, says a Duluth correspondent.

To Enforce Tax Collections.

There is great consternation at Duluth over the announcement that the county attorney will at once proceed to enforce all judgments now outstanding for delinquent personal property taxes and executions will be issued for all judgments on the books remaining unsatisfied back to the ten-year limit. This will include many of the largest corporations in that city and some of the wealthiest citizens. The number of executions will be large and the amount of money involved will also be heavy. As nothing is exempt from the levy under such an execution, it will be possible to reach almost all of the delinquents unless they have moved away or have become insolvent. A correspondent from that city says that this does not at first blush seem to be an extraordinary proceeding. The common and entirely natural supposition would be that when a person, corporation, county or state enters a judgment it is for the purpose of proceeding under that judgment to collect the amount due. With a private individual or corporation that would be the case. No execution was ever issued in St. Louis county under a judgment for delinquent personal property taxes, however. There have been judgments galore, and there are still, and many of them have been outlawed by passing the ten-year limit, but no attempts have ever been made to enforce them. Unless these taxes are collected the county will be unable to meet current expenses the coming year.

ELASTIC STARCH has been before the people of the United States for 21 years, and is without doubt, as it is greater than each succeeding year, the most popular starch in use. The unprecedented number of twenty million packages. It is prepared upon scientific principles by men who have had years of practical experience in the laundry business, and is perfectly harmless, and all summer dresses to their natural whiteness, and permits the fabric to retain its original softness. It is the only starch which can be used in the most delicate fabrics, containing neither arsenic, alum or any other substance injurious to linen, and can be used even for a baby powder.

SHOOTING FLYING FISH.

A Novel Sport Carried on In Southern California Waters.

The visitor to the island of Santa Catalina or to who goes out on the launches from Long Beach or San Pedro is always entertained by the remarkable flights of flying fish, which in some cases attain a length of 18 inches and a weight of 2 pounds. Alarmed by the boat or steamer, they dash out of the water by a vigorous movement of the screwlike tail and dash away in headlong flight, skimming over the waves like birds, presenting so remarkable an appearance that the tourist who has never seen so extraordinary a performance takes them for birds. The flying fish is not flying, but it has four very winglike fins which serve it a similar purpose—that is, it hurls itself out of the water by the aid of its tail, and then, using the four winglike fins as parachutes, goes soaring away, covering a distance of an eighth of a mile. When the inertia fails, the tail of the fish drops, and the moment it strikes the water it begins a violent twisting, which sends the fish into the air again, and by repeating this the fish is enabled to cover the long distance. The wings or fins are not flapped, the only motion being a tremulous one imparted to them when the tail is twisted in the water. As the boat glides along these fish dart from the water and go soaring away on either side, and it is then that the sportsman, sitting in the bow, has an opportunity for some novel sport.

The fish move like some quail, very low, not more than two feet from the surface, and are not the easy shots one might imagine. They move rapidly and appear to rise and fall over the waves and go sweeping away in graceful curves. Sometimes four or five are in the air at the same time, and the good shot can bring them down to the right and left. All that is needed to carry out the idea of quail shooting would be to have a dog, but there is a sea dog that flushes this attractive game, the agile tuna. The flying fish is its legitimate prey, and big schools come sweeping in from the deep sea, driving the schools of flying fish before them, chasing them into the air six, eight and ten feet, giving marvelous exhibitions of lofty tumbling. At such times the flying fishes are crazed with terror and leave the water by scores and hundreds. They fly into boats, out upon the dry beaches, strike bonnets who happen to be in the way of their headlong flight and present a most attractive appearance to those who have never seen a flock of ocean fliers in the air with fish 6 or 7 feet long pursuing in a series of leaps or jumps. Sometimes the tuna chases the flier along just below the surface, catching it as it drops, a circle of foam alone telling the story.—Santa Catalina.
