THE GRAND CROOKER
 HIS TAILOR CALLS ON HIM TO COLLECT HIS LITTLE BILL.

And Major Crofoot, Graveler For the Credits Received to Him, Takes the Man at the Throats Into the University Fishball Company.

(Copyright 1926 by C. S. Lewis)

When Major Crofoot reached his office the other morning, he found his tailor at the door. The tailor had been there for an hour. He had a bill in his hand, and he was determined to present it to his boss.

"What's that?" asked the major, looking at the bill.

"That's your bill for the suit you ordered me to make," said the tailor.

"I haven't seen it yet," said the major.

"It's here," said the tailor, handing him the bill.

"By George, but this is a curious coincidence indeed! Talk of mental telegraphy, but your face was before me as I struck the first nail!"

"Major Crofoot, I am here!"

"Yes, you are here about a little bill, and I am glad of it. Come in and sit down. Do you know that little bill of $11 has worried me more than some of $1000. I have wondered and wondered why you didn't present it."

"But I called it in for you about 30 minutes," exclaimed the tailor.

"Strange, strange! I must see the post authorities about that matter."

"And I have sent it here by a boy at least ten times."

"By a boy? And the boy never presented it? I wish you would get me that boy's name. I don't remember the name I have been on the point of sending you a check, but I wish you might take it that I wanted to see the account between us. I finally decided to wait until you dropped in."

"Well, I am here," said the tailor, "and now let me see that bill."

"Yes, you are here, and I am sorry to see that look of grim resolution on your face. You were one of my earliest friends and creditors. When I called on you and mentioned all the things you had done for me, the world was against me. All I wanted was a little time and encour-

PASSION PLAY REALISTIC.
 The Effect of the Acting Upon One Woman's Career.

In The Woman's Home Companion Lillian Bell writes of her experiences at Oberlin and of the impressions made upon her by the great Christ drama. She continues with these vivid words:

"As to the play itself, I wish I need say nothing about it. My mind, my heart, my soul, have all been writhed and twisted with such emotion as is not pleasant to feel nor expedient to speak about. It was too real, too heart-rending, too awful. I hate, I shudder, to try to feeling things so actual. I wish I were a skeptic, a scoffer, an atheist. I wish I could put my mind on the mechanism of the real play. I wish I could believe that it all took place 2000 years ago. I wish I didn't know that this suffering on the stage was all actual. I wish I thought those people were really Tyro-lese peasants, wood carvers and pot-tery makers, and that the agony was only a play. I hate the women who are weeping all around me. I hate the men who are letting the tears run down their cheeks and whose shoulders are heaving with their sobs. It is as awful to see a man cry."

"But so, it is all true. It is taking place. I am one of the women at the foot of the cross. The anguish, the cry, the sob, are all real. There, my friend, the cross, with its piteous burden, is outlined against the real sky. My hands, like hands of Calvary. Doves flutter in and out, and butterflies dart about the skirts of sunlight. The expression on Christ's face is one of unguished, forgiveness and unselfishness. Then his head droops forward of his breast. It grows dark, the weeping becomes lamentation, and as the fingers to thrust the spear into his side, from which I have felt and heard the blood, I have seen and been seen to pour forth. I turn faint and close my eyes. It has gone too far. I am no longer myself, but a disorganized heap of rickety nerves and hysterical weeping, and I am not even the doer of the deed, the rising from the dead or the triumphant ascent into the clouds of glory. The Passion play but once in a lifetime!"

MOUNTAIN AIR.
 Why is it more healthful than that of Lower Altitudes?

The only air which is mountain air is healthier than low air in that mountain air is cleaner than low air. The chemical composition of the atmosphere here is different. The air is pure, clear, and free from all the impurities of the lowlands. The air is not saturated with water vapor, and it is not laden with dust and dirt. The air is not polluted by the smoke of factories and the exhausts of automobiles. The air is not tainted by the odor of sewage and the filth of cities. The air is pure and healthful, and it is the only air that is fit to breathe.

At a schoolmaster once said to his pupils that the boy who would make the best piece of composition in five minutes on "How to Overcome Habit" he would give a prize. When the five minutes had expired, a lad of 9 years stood up and said: "Well, sir, habit is hard to overcome. If you take off the first letter, it does not change 'habit'." If you take off another, you still have a 'bit' left. If you take off still another, the whole of it remains. If you take off another, it is not totally used up, all of which goes to show that if you want to get rid of a habit you must throw it off altogether." Result, he won it.

The First Kindergarten.
 The first kindergarten was opened by Froebel in 1837 at Brandenburg, Germany, and 15 years afterward he died. This short period was sufficient to establish a system of education that made life different for little children. When the king of Prussia in 1851 forced the establishment of kindergartens, the old man died of a broken heart, not dreaming that his life work had been a great success.

What Attracted Them. "It is perfectly natural," said one whose own sentiments have been somewhat increased where he may be in the neighborhood of his own business. I know I am in mine. When I strike a strange place, I like to go through the quarters where they carry on the business that I am engaged in and see how they run things in it. But I have lately met with two illustrations of this sort of thing that seemed to me to be rather curious as well as interesting.

He Relieved the Man. It was a lovely opened furniture store, and one window was resplendent with mirrors and crystal chandeliers of brilliancy. Coincidentally they announced to get letters. "Any article removed from the window," so when Smithson walked in and requested to see the book blue in the front row, the police assistant disarranged the front and after some considerable trouble brought out the desired object.

Was a Heavy Opened. The day associated with the delinquent industry on the Newfoundland banks are many and grave. Foremost among them is that the delinquent banks were failing, which involves the capacity of many of them.

It was simply an exhibition of nerve and quick wit. "I said the old banker who was dining at his club with a number of friends.

Lost in Self-Administration. It happened in an "L" car. He was tall, handsome and had a well-dressed and was reading a pamphlet on which stood out in letters large enough to be plainly legible to the opposite row of passengers the title "Character Lines." They all noticed him, for he was really beautiful.

Not a Success. The experiment was not a success. Professor he had completed that he was not as he used to be, his hair seemed to have grown cold and that he was too prosaic and matter of fact.

Down in China. In China those are often round, flat slatted or semicircular. In placing them the builder usually avoids having one open end, but they are usually of an elaborate kind, and the octagonal form is one of the most popular.

DEATHS.

John R. Huntley, of East Brainerd, died Tuesday, Nov. 21st, of liver and kidney troubles. He was born Aug. 11, 1843, in the state of Virginia. In 1861 he entered the service of the U. S., being a member of Co. A, 7th regiment Illinois volunteers, for two years. At the end of that time he re-enlisted for an additional term of three years, being finally mustered out of service July 19, 1864. In 1866 he came to Brainerd, and in 1889 was married to his now bereaved wife. He leaves a wife, five children, three sisters and two brothers. The funeral services will be held at the German Evangelical church next Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

An Expensive Fire.

Fire and water did considerable damage early Monday morning to the Big 9 shoe store and Dresskell's jewelry store. The fire occurred about 2 a. m. and probably caught from the chimney in Dresskell's store. The department responded quickly to the alarm and extinguished the blaze before the fire had made much headway, but both the stock of jewelry and Mr. Walters' boot and shoe stock were badly damaged, more by water than by fire, the latter suffering the greater loss. Mr. Walters estimates his damage at $1,000, the jewelry store at $300, and the damage to the building is probably about the same amount. All the losses are fully covered by insurance.

Mr. Dresskell retains an interest in his jewelry store, and thence he will spend his summers here. Their many friends sincerely hope that they will always consider Brainerd their home, and regret their departure temporarily. Kaley Dresskell preceded them, going on Monday evening.

THE STORE DETECTIVE.

At Times He Makes It Complaint For Others Than Himself.

A young woman who sings in a church choir in this city was in one of the department stores the other day when the detective employed there stopped her and, pointing to a woman with a long cape and a bag at an adjoining counter, said: "Just watch that woman work."

The singer saw the woman take two articles from the counter when the singer was not looking and drop them into her bag.

"Why, she is stealing," she said.

"Yes," said the detective, "and if you will follow her to the next counter with me you will see her take more things."

The singer was interested, and she walked along with the detective. Two more articles were dropped in the bag, and then the detective arrested the shoplifter. She made the usual scene and protested her innocence. The detective asked the singer for her assistance and told her that she must be in the police court at 9 o'clock on the following morning as a witness. It was the singer's turn to make a scene. She protested against being dragged into a police court and said that such notices would seriously injure her in her work. The detective insisted, and had the charge against the shoplifter not withdrawn before the case reached the court, the singer would have been one of the witnesses. She denounced the detective and the store which employed him for imposing on the patrons in that fashion, and she is going to make it her business hereafter to keep out of the way of store detectives. Had the singer been forced to go to court her punishment in the consequent notoriety would have been as hard as that inflicted on the shoplifter.—New York Sun.
