BRAINERD TRIBUNE.

VOL. VII—NO. 42. BRAINERD, MINNESOTA, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1878 WHOLE NO. 354.

The Bismarck Tribune comes to us now in quarto form, cut and pasted, four pages patent?

The New Tacoma North Pacific Times has an article on "Ostrichism in Politics." We did not peruse the subject, but presume it refers to the science of a "good run."

The first number of "The Northern Pacific Farmer," a six column folio weekly newspaper, published at Wadena by S. S. Gardiner, its editor, and devoted to the agricultural interests of the Northern Pacific country is in our table. Wadena county is looking up now sure—two thriving, go ahead towns and two rattling go ahead newspapers. Whoop 'er up!

In speaking of the Legislative contest in this district, the BRAINERD TRIBUNE very sensibly and justly remarks: "The counties of Benton, Sherburne and Mille Lacs stood nobly for Mr. Bly, and it will be our constant aim and desire, as it will be the desire of Mr. Bly and his friends in this county to stand by them at every opportunity in the future." We'll remember that, Bro. Hartley, and if ever anything happens in the future, whereby we can help Crow Wing county, we'll be there." [Elk River Star.

Christian Gasner, of St. Paul, a member of the I. O. O. F. and of the A. O. U. W., having a life insurance policy of $2,000 in each drawn payable to his parents, was taken down recently with consumption and, with the best of care and treatment. He was turned out of doors, however, by a parsimonious and brutal father who knew nothing of his insurance, but he soon found friends in the fraternities to which he belonged, and was taken in and tenderly cared for by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Brand, until his death which occured on Monday last. Previous to his death, however, he changed his policies, making one payable to his sister, and the other to Mrs. Brand who cared for him with a mother's tenderness and is now munificently rewarded for her charitable hospitality in the sum of $2,000, while his parents, very much chagrined over their loss, very properly receive nothing. Mr. Gasner was about 23 years of age, a very exemplary young man and was an employe at the St. Paul Harvester Works where he was highly esteemed.

Fargo gave a rather high-toned, not to say elaborate ball and supper at Chapin's new Hall on Thursday evening last, eclipsing, in preparations, management and detail, anything of the kind in the history of the Northern Pacific road. Tickets were placed at $25.00 per couple, and 150 were sold, netting $3,750.00. The ball room and dining hall were extravagantly decorated, ornamented and furnished, no expense being spared in their arrangement. The ceilings were festooned and the walls draped with velvet and silk; two large mirrors, rented for the occasion at a cost of fifty dollars and their insurance, ornamented either end of the hall room, and the tables and chairs, the solid silverware and gold plate throughout, the table furniture alone costing the management over $1,000. Mr. Hartz's Silver Cornet Band, of St. Paul, furnished the music, and the citizens and guests—some of the latter coming from the distant cities of Milwaukee, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Bismarck—for a time abandoned themselves to unlimited enjoyment, their only care being how to make the affair as princely as money lavishly expended could obtain.

Judge Stearns, of Duluth, passed through Brainerd Tuesday on his way home from holding a term of court just closed at Moorhead, Clay county. He reports a very little civil business transacted during the term, but of criminal proceedings there was no end. The grand jury brought in 32 indictments, as follows: Sodomy, 1; horse stealing, 1; murder, 1; wilful neglect of official duty, felony, 1; escape of a prisoner, (Dep. Sheriff,) 1; assault with a dangerous weapon, 2; petit larceny, 3; keeping house of ill-fame, 5; selling liquor on Sunday, 7. Of these two were convicted on trial, 11 plead guilty, 7 were continued and 2 were not arrested when court adjourned. Among the indicted were the clerk of the court Hendricks for stabbing Bolkin; deputy sheriff for permitting escape of Vandecar; Vandecar for murder of Fannie Clark and for shooting at J. B. Blanchard, and Mrs. Sloggy, proprietress of the Bramble House, with all liquor dealers in the town, for selling liquor on Sunday. The judge thought when his clerk, sheriff, deputy sheriff and landlady were indicted it was time for him to adjourn court before it went further, or it is hard to tell where the grand jury might have ended. Judgment was temporarily suspended by the court in the liquor cases, and will depend largely upon the future conduct of the dealers, who are now on probation, and will receive light penalties if they obey the law, otherwise Judge Stearns says he will give them the full benefit of the heaviest penalty the law provides.

A Nuisance to be Abated.

The Globe has frequently spoken of those public nuisances, the hotel runners. Frequently spoken of them, because they give the people of this city considerable annoy, have proved themselves a constant source of annoyance to the law abiding public who visit St. Paul.—[St. Paul Globe.

They are indeed a glaring nuisance and a disgrace to the sanitary city. We have frequently considered seriously the subject of entering a complaint at police headquarters against the insolent, howling mob of runners and hack drivers who invariably assail passengers the moment they step from the cars, blockading the avenue of egress to the street, crowding them upon boxes, trunks, etc., insulting ladies, tupping over children, and dogging your heels like yelping curs.

On our last visit to the city, we were accompanied by an invalid sister and it was with the utmost difficulty that we elbowed our way through the infernal gang and protected the lady from positive injury, and but for a gingering policeman who stood passively by, we were sorely tempted to peel our coat and knock one puppy into the middle of next summer, who persistantly crowded himself into our face yelping "Sherman House." We sincerely hope the Globe may succeed in abating the nuisance.

The Compromise.

What was stated yesterday in regard to the treaty between the St. Paul & Pacific and the Northern Pacific railroad companies covers substantially all the important points. The St. Paul & Pacific grants the Northern Pacific the joint use of the tracks and depots from Sauk Rapids to St. Paul under a lease in perpetuity, or for ninety-nine years—which, though necessarily in the form of a lease, is in effect a sale to the Northern Pacific of one undivided half interest in that line of road, the St. Paul & Pacific reserving the local traffic on the line, and agreeing also to keep the track in good condition, to replace the iron rails when worn out with steel rails, and to take the necessities of the business require, to put in a double track. The St. Paul & Pacific also reserves to its own use the track and depot grounds at St. Paul, except that it is to share its passenger tracks and houses with the Northern Pacific; but a supplementary arrangement has been made with a committee of citizens whereby the latter is to be furnished with sufficient grounds for its tracks and depot and other houses. The Northern Pacific reserves the right to run on the St. Paul & Pacific tracks into Minneapolis West, and also into St. Cloud. If any west side railroad is built it is to be built by the two companies jointly. The controversy which has been pending between the two companies as to the title of certain lands where their respective grants intersect in the territory of which Glyndon is the centre has been adjusted on mutually satisfactory terms. About 300,000 acres of land were in dispute, and the representatives of the two companies found no difficulty in settling that little matter when the subject was approached in a friendly manner. The two companies are not to encroach by lateral lines on each other's territory, though the Northern Pacific reserves the right to build a lateral spur of thirty miles on the west side of the Red River. This gives the St. Paul & Pacific in full possession of the Red river valley, except the belt adjacent to the Northern Pacific, and of the Manitoba trade. Minor points relating to freight arrangements it is unnecessary to mention, except to say that all freight coming to Duluth for either road is to be carried by the Northern Pacific. If destined for Manitoba or points on the St. Paul & Pacific, the revenues are to be divided pro rata. We may repeat, however, that the arrangement covers all points of conflict between the companies, provides for the amicable settlement of all disputes, and is to all intents and purposes a treaty of perpetual peace between these great corporations, who were represented in the negotiations by some of their ablest and most influential men. They recognized, as the common basis of their efforts to compromise their difficulties the broad fact that there was ample room in the vast regions of the Northwest for the other—and too grand in its scope to be trammelled by any local disputes arising out of the grants made to them. Let it at this end. The St. Paul & Pacific, while looking to the development of the stretch, of fertile territory of which the its lines in Minnesota, is reaching out to lay hold of the transcontinental trade to be created by the Canadian Pacific, through the chain of British colonies which are being rapidly organized through the rich plains of the Saskatchewan. The Northern Pacific is left free by its disentanglement from local conflicts in Minnesota to work out its great destiny in extending its great continental highway to Puget Sound. As we said yesterday, another section of 200 miles of the Northern Pacific is to be built next year, from Bismarck to the Yellowstone. The road has been placed upon such a solid footing of commercial credit by its late arrangements for two or three years past that it is enabled to command all the money necessary to complete this section of road. The wealthy stockholders are themselves abundantly able from their own resources or credit to supply the needful funds. And they have concluded to go on and build this additional two hundred miles without asking for new congressional extension of their time—relying upon the decision of the United States supreme court that the grant is valid until a declaration of forfeiture is made by congress or by the judicial department of the government. This, it is certain, will never be done, and in this faith the company is going on to prosecute the construction of their great highway—in the full confidence that within five years they will reach the Pacific coast.—Pioneer Press.

Hedry Sheriff's Fees.

The Wisconsin Supreme Court has decided that the Sheriff is only entitled to mileage when plaintiff is entitled to full fees allowed by statute, even when the attorney incurs no liability. The fees allowed by law to the sheriff for copies are ten cents per folio. Chippewa county, during the past year has commenced several actions to foreclose tax deeds. The summons and complaints were served by the sheriff there on defendants residing in Chippewa county, by the sheriff of Ramsey county, and on the defendants residing in Rau Claire county by the sheriff of this county. The summons and complaint were printed and copies given to the sheriffs for service. The plaintiff in none of the cases were very long, consisting over one hundred folio and one hundred folio

THE NEWS CONDENSED

MONEY WANTED.

The Howard association of New Orleans telegraphs to Mayor Stokely, of Philadelphia, that $30,000 will be necessary to enable the association to pay its debts and close its labors.

SUICIDE.

Charles E. Peters, aged 18, a type setter in the New Ulm, Minnesota Herald office, committed suicide on the morning of the 19th inst., by hanging himself with a small cord. No cause for the rash act is stated.

GRAVE ROBBERS IN LIMBO.

The grand jury of Zanesville Ohio have found indictments against the grave robbers, Lyman Easton, Capt. Hilliard, and Dr. Heyel. It is thought Hilliard, who is much affected by his position, will make a full confession.

AN EXPRESS THIEF.

A package of money, $25,000, in transit by Southern express from Charleston to Athens, was lost some time ago near Yemassee, and now the messenger, Walter S. Lynch, an old employe of the express company, has been arrested.

FATAL LEAP.

Frank M. Laylor, paying teller of the New York City bank, on the 17th inst., jumped from the second story of the "Health Lift" establishment of Montague, East Brooklyn. His skull was fractured and he was otherwise injured.

ELECTION FRAUDS.

In Philadelphia, Pa. the entire election board of the Eight division, Fourthward, four Republicans and five Democrats, have beed arrested by the United States marshal charged with returning more votes than were legally cast.

REPUDIATION OFFICIALLY RECOMENDED.

3 Mayor Patton of New Orleans, in his message, concludes the premium bond plan is a failure, and suggests scaling the city debt at 50 cents on a dollar and a cumulative sinking fund system which will pay off the entire debt in twenty-two years, in the meantime paying 5 per cent, interest.

ASSASSINATION OF SOVEREIGNS.

A telegram from Berlin reports the belief current there that a plot exists for the assassination of all sovereigns. It states that the Prussian judges, when examining Nobeling's case, were led to believe in the existence of the central organization for the purpose, and investigations are still going on.

AWARD TO BE PAID.

The secretary of State declines, as yet, to make public the contents of the dispatch mailed by him to Minister Welch upon the receipt of Lord Saulsbury's letter of the 17th inst.; but there is no reason to doubt that it contains the assurance that the $5,500,000 awarded by the fisheries commission will be paid before the 23d, the treaty limit of time for its payment.

AN ALDERMAN IN TROUBLE.

John G. Kelly, alderman in the first ward, of Cincinati, O., has been found guilty in the United States court of procuring illegal votes at the recent election. The voting was done by a river man who, although he said he lived in Pittsburg, gave Kelly's residence to the election judges as his own. The extreme penalty of the law is $500 fine and three year's imprisonment.

POLYGAMY ENDORSED.

At Salt Lake, Utah, Mormon women held a meeting in the theatre lately and passed a resolution avowing belief in the patriarchial order of marriage as revealed to God's people in passages which, if lived up to, are conducive to long life, strength, glory; and endorse it as one of the most important principles of our holy religion and claim the right of its practice.

BUSINESS IN NEW ORLEANS.

Collections in the internal revenue department: which four weeks ago averaged $600 daily, now range at $1,500. A large amount of goods in the surveyor's department awaiting transmission to Texas, will be forwarded as soon as the Galveston quarantine is raised. Marshal Wharton left for Washington this evening on a telegraphic summons from the attorney general.

THE GREAT BANK ROBBERY.

It is confidently believed the New York police have dispelled the mystery surrounding the Manhattan savings bank robbery, that one of the chief operators is in custody and that further arrests will be made. A man whose name appears on the police returns as Henry Vreland has been arrested and arraigned in the police court, when he was remanded to prison until further evidence could be obtained.

TORNTO PIECES BY A LOCOMOTIVE.

On the 14th inst., John Summers, a German, living in St. Paul, Minnesota, laborer on a gravel train on the St. Paul & Pacific railroad, was run over by a locomotive near the Plow Works, and crushed and cut litterally to pieces. The fog of the early morning, and the smoke of the engine, in a narrow pass, obscured vision and confused him so that he could not escape. His ages was 46 years. He leaves a family.

ADULTERATION.

The Government officers in New York City are continuing the investigations into the adulterations of refined sugars. They decline to make known the result of their analysis at present, preferring not tomention the names of the suspected refiners until the proofs of fraud are firmly established. Collector Merrit thinks it the duty of the board of health to protect consumers of sugar from the evil effects of poisonous adulterations.

FATAL RAILROAD ACCIDENT.

A special from Charlotte, N. B., says New Brunswick railway cars ran off the track near Lawrenceville on the 15th inst. A passenger car containing twenty passengers took fire and was burned, and Mr. Parker, of Fort Fairfield, killed. A child was burned and seventy-five persons injured. Other dispatches state that Nathan Perry, of Presque Isle, former proprietor of the Hatch House, that city, was killed and burned.

FATAL ACCIDENT.

At Sunrise City, Chisago county, Minn., Charles Muhlstatt at work in Mold's gristmill, in attempting to repair some machinery his right arm caught between two large cog-wheels and was ground to a pulp up to t shoulder. He was twisted around the wheel several times and severely injured inte. nally A doctor amputated the arm but the man expired at 5 o'clock next morning. He has a wife and family living at Henderson, and a brother at St. Paul. He was a native of Sweden.

REVENUE MARINE SEVICE.

The annual report of the revenue marine bureau of the United States treasury department shows that of vessels wrecked or in distress with the aggregate of 927 persons on board, 192 have been assisted by revenue cutters. The estimated value of the property saved is about $1,700,000, and 142 persons were actually rescued from death by drowning. The expenses of the revenue marine service for the year ending June 30, 1878, were $844,001. Number of vessels in the service, 37.

MURDEROUS BRUTALITY.

Chas. Young, Archibald Steen and a son of the latter, working a farm on shares near Labanon, O., had a misunderstanding on the 15th inst., during which Steen and son clubbed Young until he was insensible. A hired man of Young's coming to the rescue met the same fate. Mrs. Young and daughter came upon the scene, and were both felled to the earth with clubs. The Steens then fled and have not since been heard of. Physicians say it is unlikely that Young or the hired man will recover.

TO BE HUNG.

In accordance with the opinion of the attorney general, Gov. Hartranft of Pennsylvania, has decided to issue a warrant for the execution, on the 18th of December next, of the notorious Molly Maguire, John Kehoe, who was convicted of the murder of S. W. Landon in Schuylkill county in 1863. Warrants were also issued for the execution on the same day of Martin Bergen, of Schuylkill county, Charles Sharpe and James O'Donnell of Carbon county, and Alex. Sayre, of Philadelphia.

SLEEPING CAR BURNED.

A lamp over-turned in the St. Louis sleeper on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, west bound express, at 3 o'clock in the morning, about seven miles east of Cumberland, Md., setting fire to the curtains. There were hirty-five passengers in the car, several of them being ladies and children. All escaped in their night clothes, losing all their small baggage, money and jewelry. No one was hurt. The car was destroyed. A number of the passengers were New Orleans refugees returning home.

PENITENTIARY FIRE.

There has been a distructive fire in the Virginia penitentiary at Richmond, which burned a three story brick building over 1,000 feet long, in which were the cooper, carpenter shoe and machine shops. Another building of similar proportions occupied as a tobacco manufactory and as a hall for the prisoners, was considerably damaged. There was much excitement among the prisoners, but the guards, aided by the police of the city and militia, prevented any attempt to escape. Loss about $165,000. No insurance.

NATIONALS IN CONGRESS.

Indianaplis telegram: Rev. Dr. De La Matyr, National Congressman elect, who has ust returned from an Eastern campaign, gave it as his opinion that the Nationals will hold the balance of power in the next Congress. I in that event they should stand together, wield their power as a unit, and demand an uncompromising greenback man for speaker and a fair proportion of the appointment and patronage of the House for the National party. He also recommends a similar policy in the legislature of Indiana.

FATAL MOB SHOOTING.

A special dispatch from Mount Sterling, Ky., to the Courier-Journal, says a riot took place there on the 18th inst., in which from twenty to thirty shots were fired and two men instantly killed and three wounded. Two of the rioters, George and William Howard, were wounded, one dangerously. John Thompson, a clerk and disinterested party, was shot and instantly killed by a shot fired through the window of the store in which he was employed. Three of the rioters were arrested. Sheriff and posse on the trail of the rest.

INDICTED.

The grand jury of Xenia, O., have indicted A. H. Bouhlmann, A. J. Trader, Samuel Potterbaugh, John Steele and John D. Allen, the cashier and directors of the Frst National bank of Xenia, for embezzlement and converting to their own use money and bonds to the amount of $65,000, belonging to depositors, without the consent of the banking company or the owners of said property. All the parties have been considered of the highest respectability. All the accused entered into personal recognizances in the sum of $5,000 to appear for trial.

STEWART GRAVE ROBBERY.

Whalen and Burke, arrested for alleged complicity in the Stewart grave robbery, were arranged before Justice Morgan, in the Jefferson market police court, New York on the 19th inst. Capt. Byrnes made formal complaint against the men, and counsel for the prisoners began to cross-examine him. The captain refused to give the name of the party or parties who gave him the information against the accused, and the counsel refused to proceed any further. The judge held the prisoners in $5,000 to answer.

INUNDATION.

Norwich, England is inundated by a freshet in the river Winsom, in consequence of two days' and two nights' steady rain. Two of the most densely populated districts are several feet under water. The basement of factories, warehouses, graneries and dwellings along the river are flooded. One or two deaths by drowning are reported. Four or five miles of the streets are submerged, and from three to four thousand dwellings are made uninhabitable. The result is vast pecuniary damage. The authorities are maintaining the homeless poor.

BODY SNATCHING IN OHIO.

At Zanesville, Ohio, a policeman had his suspicions aroused at the movements of a party in a wagon, and ordered them to halt, but the driver whipped the horses into a gallop and escaped. The policeman procured assistance and followed them fourteen miles before he was able to catch up with them. On attempting to arrest them the whole party umped from the wagon and escaped to the woods. The wagon was found to contain the bodies of four prominent citizens who had been buried in Woodland cemetary. Policeman Still received a pistol wound from the men in the wagon during the chase.

STABBED.

Angelo Spanglo, in East Broadway, near Chatham Square, New York, on the 15th inst., stabbed Peter Drake in the neck with a long knife. Spanglo, after plunging the weapon into Drake, ran away. Drake shouted "I am stabbed!" and pursued the Italian as far as Mott street, when he fell and expired. An attache of the board of public works, who witnessed the murder, gave chase. Spanglo ran through Mott to Park street and thence into Baxter. He was captured in a miserable hovel near Five Points, after a hard struggle. He gives as the reason for the murder that Drake had attempted to cut him and blacked his eye during a quarrel.

SHOT.

Warren Tate shot and killed Wm. Love in the court house in Indianapolis, Ind., on the 19 inst. Love had been a witness in a case wherein Tate is plaintiff. After leaving the stand he met Tate in the corridor when Love called Tate a liar and struck him. Tate shot him twice, Love dying about six o'clock. After the shooting Tate went into the court room, was called to the stand and gave his testimony in the case in progress. In view of several murders of recent date much excitement existed. It was some time before it was considered safe to attempt placing Tate in jail. Love was a prominent real estate dealer, and Tate is of a fine family, but is best known as a husband of a former notorious courtesan of this city, but now of Chicago.

NEW TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

Rumor of a proposed organization of another telegraph company have been current in New York for some days. The persons who were mentioned in connection with the enterprise include Jay Gould, Russel Sage, Frank Work, and several prominent speculators on the Pacific coast. A banker said in the office of Gould: A conference had been held at which the prospect of establishing a new company with a cash capital of $10,000,000 had been considered. The different railroad lines were represented at the conference, among them being the Pennsylvania, Philadelphia & Reading, New York Central, Lake Shore, Erie and Great Western and Baltimore & Ohio companies. The Western Union officials say the report is a mere stock jobbing canard.

CUTTING RAILROAD FARES.

The competition in eastward bound passenger rates, which, it is asserted, have been secretly cut for three or four months past, have finally forced prices down to the lowest figure known for years. The Atlantic & Great Western announced New York and Philadelphia tickets at $1 each, Pittsburgh $3.75, with fares to some common points in Ohio of a nominal sum. The Pan-Handle rates to New York and Philadelphia have not yet been reduced below $5, but this will no doubt follow its opponents with decreased charges. Tickets sold at these prices are rebate tickets, and speculators have no opportunity to take advantage of the reduction All agents report good sales, and know nothing of the return to former prices.

SUICIDE AND FIRE.

On the morning of the 19th of November Otto Montgomery residing in St. Paul, Minnesota, aged 54 years, shot himself in the forehead. He lay through the day, in a nearly insensible condition. In the evening his son Edward, aged about 20, went to his father's room with a lamp, and says he became faint, and fell on the bed. He did not know what became of the lamp but soon found himself on fire. He rushed to the street with his clothing on fire, which was soon extinguished by ready hands. An alarm of fire was given, and the rooms were soon drenched with water. The old man was found dead, his body being badly burned. The boy in badly burned, and his condition precarious.

CONSOLIDATION.

Negotiations for the consolidation of he Daily Jorunal, Republican, and St. Louis Times, the Democratic paper, of St. Louis, Mo., has been closed and hereafter the papers will be published as the Times-Journal and conducted as a strictly non-partisan newspaper. Geo. C. Hale, heretofore editor of the Journal, will be managing editor of the Times-Journal, and Emery S. Foster and Eugene Field, of the latter paper, will have places on the staff. Major R. S. Sylvester, former managing editor of the Times, will be retained, but his position is not yet defined. The business management will remain unchanged, with B. M. Chambers at the head, and Mr. Fisher as actual manager. The Evening Dispatch, which was owned by the proprietors of the Journal, will be published for some days yet, but it is understood negotions are pending for its purchase by the owners of the Evening Post.

SUNDAY BOAT RACE.

On Sunday afternoon Nov. 17th at St. Louis, Mo., an exciting four-oared boat race took place between the Modoc and St. Louis crew for a wager of $250 a side, made by H Clay Sexton, chief of the fire department, and J. A. St. John, president of the Modoc club, one-half the money, to be expended in a gold medal for the winning crew. The course was from the northern wall of the arsenal up stream to the stake boats, stationed about 100 yards below the bridge, and return to the starting point, distant about six miles. The contest was close and spirited throughout, and resulted in a victory to the St. Louis crew by half a length. Time, 47½ minutes. The St. Louis boys used their boat, H. Clay Sexton, while the Modocs ro ved their shell, Sob Ingersoll. The river bank was lined with spectators the whole length of the course, the crowd throughout being estimated at 25,000.

ABOUT THE YELLOW FEVER.

A New Orleans telegram of Nov. 20th says, one death from yellow fever for the past twenty-four hours. A number of merchants called at the office of the board of health for an authoritative opinion as to the safety of strangers in the city at the present time. Dr Taylor, secretary of the board, in reply said experience of the present epidemic has demonstrated that those prostrated only contracted the disease after they had absorbed a sufficient amount of poison to be unable any longer to resist. Those who recently died have been here during the summer and were only compelled to succomb at the last. It is my opinion that no recent visitors, in the present atmospheric condition, could absorb enough to experience any inconvenience, and hence I consider it absolutely safe.

FATAL SHOT.

On Thursday afternoon a row occurred in McDermott's saloon on the corner of Eagle and Hill streets, St. Paul, Minnesota. Drinking and a game of cards resulted in a quarrel and the fatal shot. Ryan, the bar-keeper claimed that James J. Beach owed the bar ten cents. Beach denied it and refused to pay. Ryan shut the door and said he should not leave till he paid. Beach drew a revolver and said he would leave, and would not pay. McDermott drew a revolver, to cover Ryan. Alexander Hamilton rushed in between Beach and Ryan, and attempted to wrest the pistol from the former, when it was discharged, fatally wounding him in the abdomen. Beach was then knocked down and brutally mauled. The police were notified and Beach taken into custody, and Hamilton was taken to the city hospital, where he died at 7:45 P. M. Beach was committed. He claims that the shooting was accidental, and manifests great contrition. The dying man said the shooting was purely accidental, resulting in his effort to quel the quarrel.

ATTEMPT TO ASSASSIATE THE KING OF ITALY

The king and queen arrived in Naples on the 17th inst., and were enthusiastically received by immense crowds. Several persons on the Strada Carbocana presented a petition to their majesties. A man at this moment rushed upon the king with a dagger and succeeded in inflicting a scratch upon his left arm and slightly wounding Signor Coiroli in the left thigh. The king displayed great coolness, and struck the assassin on the head with his sword and Signor Coiroli seized him by the hair. The assassin was immediately taken to the guard house. The queen and son, who were in the carriage with the king, displayed much courage. The assassin's name is Geovanni Passaunante. He says he does not like the king. Fifty thousand persons with flags and bands of music soon after the news reached Rome, assembled on the Corso to manifest their joy at the escape of the king. Another demonstration has been made before the house of the syndei. The crowds everywhere demand prompt justice. The Austrian embassy was illuminated and the crowd cheered the ambassador.

TRADE WITH MEXICO.

Hon. John G. Foster, United States minister to Mexico, in response to a request from the Manufacturers' Association of the Northwest, has prepared and sent to the state department elaborate papers to be transmitted the above named association, giving the results of careful study concerning the prospects and available means for the extension of our commerce with Mexico. Mr. Foster states that the prohibitory tariff and revolutionary condition of Mexico form great obstacles to any extended foreign trade, and until they are removed our merchants will, as a general thing, continue to find more inviting markets elsewhere. [illegible] nevertheless, that there is a limited field which may be occupied by Americans, and regards it as entirely feasible and safe for American manufacturers to continue their efforts in kindred branches, and establish in the City of Mexico warehouses, for the exhibition and sale of the products of their factories. In this way local merchants and consumers will have a practical display of the superior merits of American goods and wares, and their sale can be gradually increased and a permanent market created.

ENGLISH GRAIN.

The Mark Lane Express says: Very cold weather throughout the kingdom with heavy snow, hail, and rain, seriously delayed agricultural operations. Fortunately field labor was fairly advanced before the weather broke, but dry weather is now desirable to enable northern farmers to end their autumn sowing. Notwithstanding the cold weather, and the beginning of what promises to be a long, severe winter, there has been a want of buoyancy in the wheat trade which is very disappointing to sellers. Heavy rain having prevented threshing, supplies of English wheat have been curtailed in the country markets and Mark Lane, while the condition of the bulk of offerings has undergone further deterioration. Daily complaints are heard that millers are obliged to use a large proportion of dry foreign produce in their manufactories, hard Russian and Indian varieties being most in request for this purpose. Imports of foreign wheat into London has been moderate. The bulk of supply was shipped at Constadt or St. Petersburg. Notwithstanding small arrivals at ports of call, the floating cargo trade has been quiet for American wheat at a decline of about a shilling per quarter, while Russian sorts have been steady. Barley firm and maize lower.

JINGLE'S JOBS.

How a Reverend Sinner Played a Game for the Heart and Shekles of a Widow.

[Terre Haute Special to Chicago Tribune.]

The celebrated confidence preacher, the Rev. John Williams, who, a short time ago, came to this city, succeeded in deluding a worthy widow, Mrs. William Piper, and was admitted to her house by representations about an expected fortune due her from an estate in Canada, which he by some means knew of, and who also imposed upon the members of the Moffatt Street Methodist church, where he was admitted in the pulpit, collected a large sum of money, and fled so rapidly when the widow's lawyer pressed him about the estate, has been captured and is now in jail here awaiting trial for several crimes. He is about 50 years old, of Canadian origin, speaks with an English accent, is very gentlemanly in appearance, dresses nicely, and is educated in manners and language. In person he is slight in build, has a pale countenance, large blue eyes, wears English-cut side whiskers and mustache, has a very heavy, wavy, dark brown hair, is romantic in style—in fact, is a strikingly-handsome man of the pathetic kind, very taking with the ladies, especially with widows, who have been in this section his special victims. He fled from here, and was lost to all search, leaving no clue until a few days since Deputy Marshal Ed. Vandever and Lieut. Fasig accidentally learned of such a person living with a widow near Charleston, Ill. He is known by several aliases—Hill, Walker, Harlan and others. Since he left here, and the affair was published, a large number of letters have been received from all over the country and Canada, asking our authorities about him, and relating a great variety of games he has played and thefts he has committed. One spoke of a theft of $500 at the leading hotel in St. Catherines, Ontario. The officers above mentioned proceeded to Charleston, and by shrewd management induced him to go with them to Paris, Ill., and from there got him into this State, pretending a widow wished to see him. He was found having a grand good time. He has made his way to the house of a worthy widow named Walker, living on her fine large farm a few miles east of Charleston, and, having by some means learned of her previous affairs and relations, pretended to be the bearer of a large sum of money to her from a relative who had died in the far West, and claimed to have the documents in the case. He produced as such a large package of papers covered with scrawling that none can read except himself. He said it was in Hebrew, and so imposed upon her that she made him welcome to her home, and he was already running her farm affairs. He only arrived there on Thursday, but on Sunday, he discharged her faithful farm hand of two years' service, and when the officers captured him, was about selling her crop of grain and a drove of hogs, and doing all her business in his familiar style. He has traveled a great deal, claims to have been a resident of California nineteen years, where his wife is now living, to be very wealthy, to have been to China and the East and West Indies, etc. He is a wonderfully plausible talker, and has had great success. The officers deserve high credit for their capture, for it rids society of a dangerous fraud. He is wanted in many places for trial, and is certain of the penitentiary.

PRINTING AND ENGZAVING.

What It Costs the U. S. Government.

The annual report of the bureau of engraving and printing shows that the aggregate expense of operating the bureau during the year was $538,861.33. In the labor and expense account less than one-fifth of the amount appropriated was expended, leaving $652,836.17 in the treasury unexpended at the close of the last fiscal year. During the present fiscal year the expenses in July were $7,145.45; in August, $11,952.25, and in September, $14,082.66. Since the 1st of October, 1877, the bureau has executed all the work upon United States notes and national bank currency, the only amount paid to private companies during the year being about $13,000 to the Columbian bank note company for work done prior to October, 1877. The number of impressions by plate printing was 20,244,490, against 18,989,427 during the preceding year. The number of sheets for customs and internal revenue stamps and of United States securities delivered in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1877, was 9,820,059. The number of sheets of the same class of work during the fiscal year 1878 was 12,518,339. The value of notes, bonds and miscellaneous securities turned out during the year ended July 30, 1877, was $708,414,645; the values of the same class of work during the fiscal year 1878 were $1,040,451,380. Eight hundred, and twenty-two persons are now employed in the bureau, the number having been increased during the last few months on account of the demand for the 4 per cent. bonds. During the year no counterfeit has appeared on any of the work engraved by the bureau. The report is signed by the late superintendent, Hon. Edward McPherson, and in concluding it he speaks of the efficiency of the force employed in the bureau and that the employes have always responded to the demands upon them and showed themselves faithful and reliable.

General Grant was offered a Knighthood by the King of Portugal, but declined the proffered honor, because, says the cable, "the law of the United States made it impossible for an officer to wear decorations, and, although he was not now in office, he prefered to respect the law."

NOT DOWN IN THE BILLS.

Sensational Performance of a Dog in a Milwaukee Theater.

Considerable excitement was aroused at a performance last Sunday evening in the Grand opera house, Milwaukee, by the extraordinary behavior of one of the principal members of the company. The piece was Miss Lina Tettenborn's sensational comedy "Tina, the Milk Vender," which has been rendered with some success in English. This time it was given in its original German. In the principal scene a large dog is introduced, hauling the milk wagon of Hartine, the heroine of the play. This dog understands English thoroughly, but, having had only the advantage of a single rehearsal in German, he became somewhat mixed as to his business,—not understanding the language, and of course mistaking his cue. When the comedian comes on and says "Hartine, are you here?" it is the dog's cue to stand still until Hartina and her lover embrace and then sing a duet. Then he follows Hartina around the stage with the milk-cart, and so on. On this occasion, when the words "Hartine, bist du hier?" were uttered, the dog made a jump for the comedian, who took fright and ran off the stage. The dog followed, barking furiously, and scattering the milk-pails all over the stage. Hartina screamed and took refuge among the opposite wings. The dog presently reappeared, and spying the prompter seated in his half-moon in front of the footlights, he made a plunge for him. The prompter dropped his book and dived through the trap-door. The dog, now thoroughly aroused, went after him, followed by the milk-wagon and what was left of the cans. Amid the yells of the audience an effort was made to rescue the unhappy and affrightened prompter. Seizing the tailboard of the cart, some of the people gave a strong pull, and a pull altogether, when up came the wagon, and then the dog, and finally the prompter—the latter in a helpless condition with the fangs of the infuriated animal firmly fastened to that part of his garment which was the last to disappear from sight. A muzzle was procured, and the dog was led from the stage, yelping at the prompter, and looking daggers in the direction of the comedian. Order was eventually restored, and the piece proceeded.

General Miles Vindicated.

[Boston Advertiser.]

The story of excessive cruelty charged upon Gen. Miles in his attack upon the Bannock Indians is fully answered in the following private letter:

STUDIO BUILDING, BOSTON, Nov. 5, 1878.—I send to you a cutting from one of the morning papers which does great injustice to one of the most gallant officers of our army, and, if not contradicted, might do him a serious injury in the minds of his countrymen. Having accompanied a body of cavalry which joined Gen. Miles the morning after his fight, and knowing the preceding movements of the troops toward the body of Bannocks, who were marking their path toward the British possessions by burned ranches and murdered families, I feel it my duty to say that the Bannocks accompanied by scouts came to Gen. Miles with propositions to surrender. The information of their presence came from Capt. Egan, Second cavalry, who was following them in an easterly direction. After an arduous march, with one officer and twenty-seven enlisted men, Gen. Miles discovered the Bannocks' camp in the afternoon, without being perceived by them, and keeping hid all night, attacked them the next day at daybreak, on a foggy morning. He knew the column which joined him afterward was within some sixteen miles, but delayed by the rising of the rivers, which made the fords impassable. Fearing that they would perceive the presence of the troops and scatter over the newly settled valley of the Yellowstone, he attacked them with his little body of men without waiting for the others—who were marching westerly from Fort Custer—to come up. He took all their horses, thus depriving them of the means of further mischief, and captured some thirty-six prisoners; the others scattered through the sage brush, which was very tall on the battle field. Gen. Miles showed every kindness to the wounded and captured. He has in all cases been both just and firm in his treatment of Indians. Last year, after the capture of Chief Joseph, with his band of Nez Perces, he deprived his own troops of much of their necessary transportation to make the captured Indians more comfortable. If you will give publicity to the denial of the charges against Gen. Miles I shall esteem it a great favor, and an act of justice to an officer whose career is laborious and troubled enough, without having his successes counted as crimes. Gen. Miles lost in this fight one officer, Capt. Bennett, Fifth infantry, and two scouts killed, and one private wounded. Yours, very truly,

GEORGE BOOTH.

A MURDEROUS DEN.

A Model Lodging House in St. Louis.

[St. Louis Special (Nov. 15) to Chicago Tribune.]

The coroner held a preliminary inquest to-day on the body of a man named F. Hilderbrandt, who died at the hospital several days ago of injuries received from an unknown man on the evening of the 3d of November. Hilderbrandt was found by a police officer lying upon the pavement near the saloon and boarding house of a man named Edward Moritz, at the corner of Main and Cedar streets, where the most notorious characters sometimes stop. The man had a ghastly wound in the top of the head, which he had received from a blunt instrument, such as a beer-mallet or a hammer. The skull was broken and blood flowed freely from the wound. The patient was removed to the hospital, where he received the best of treatment, but he died on the 6th, at 2:30 in the morning, having been speechless up to the time of death. The body was then taken to the morgue, placed on ice, and kept until to-day in the hope that the police would in the meantime make some discoveries and succeed in capturing the guilty party. One or two arrests have been made, but the coroner is satisfied that the police hit upon the wrong persons. The theory is that the man was wounded in the house and taken out and left on the street to die. The proprietor of the house states that, at 12 o'clock on the night of the murder, he was called by a boarder named Jack Gross, who asked him to come to his room and see what was the matter, as water was trickling from the ceiling. Moritz complied, and what Gross supposed to be water he was surprised to find was blood. It had been falling on the dark counterpane of the bed, and for this reason could not be detected without the closest scrutiny. The blood came from John Mueller's room, which was directly over Gross'. Moritz then went up to Mueller's room, where he found John Mueller and a young man whom he did not know in bed together. Kate Mueller was lying under the bed. Moritz thought all three pretended to be asleep, as he attempted to wake them but could not get a response. He then went down stairs and remained in his own apartments until morning. Soon after the saloon keeper had risen, the young man whom he had seen in bed with Mueller came down and asked whether any one had called for him. Moritz afterwards looked for him, but could not find him. The young man had paid for two nights' lodgings, but staid only one. As the man killed was a poor laborer, there must have been some secret reason for his murder.

A GENUINE ROMANCE.

Ellen Murphy Marries Her Supposed Murderer.

[From the New York Sun.]

Ellen Murphy's history, so mysteriously hidden since August from every one of her intimate friends who supposed her body was the found in the barrel at Silver Lake, Staten Island, in September, had its latest and to her most eventful chapter acted yesterday. In yesterday's Sun it was briefly related how Ellen left her trunk at Mrs. Condren's in Tompkinsville, and went to look for her lover, Louis Riege, in Somerville, N. J., how she did not find him, and how she then disappeared. She had hinted that she was going to Europe if Louis Riege would not provide for her and protect her when she was about to become the mother of his child. The avenues of travel to Europe were visited by reporters, but nothing could be learned of Ellen's departure by any water route from the city. It had been tacitly agreed that the fate of Ellen Murphy was to be only one of the hundreds of similar ones. A poor girl had again been weary of life, and sought self-destruction. Riege had been as anxious as anyone to know of her whereabouts. After his discharge from arrest he resumed work in Freeman's brewery, in Clifton, where eighteen months ago, he first met Ellen. A he had been in danger of indictment for the murder of Ellen while the body in the barrel was thought to be hers, and as the newspapers had heralded his testimony before the coroner's jury, and yet Ellen had not appeared to set him free, he feared that she was no longer living. On Thursday last Louis was told at the brewery that a woman wanted to see him. In a moment he stood before Ellen Murphy. With a cry of joy he took her in his arms. Her face was pale. Together the couple returned to Ellen's hired apartments in this city, where the father was presented with a healthy girl baby just two weeks old. Its blue eyes and its nose are the reproduction of Ellen's, while the lower face is an image of Louis. A Sun reporter, calling on the young couple last evening, found them on the point of starting out to be married. A friendly German woman in the house had the baby in charge, and was to stay at home and care for it until Ellen and Louis should return.

The bride elect wore a drab dress trimmed with navy blue, and a blue ribbon was at her throat. She took from a nail a white hat, jauntily cocked up on one side, and tastefully trimmed with light blue silk. "Be careful of the baby," was her parting request. Louis, who wore a business suit, picked up his soft felt hat, and, before putting it on, bent over the baby and kissed it tenderly. The reporter was an invited guest, and on the way to the ministers, Ellen told, while riding in a street car, some of her history. She refused, however, to reveal where she went after giving up Louis, in August. It was not to any rooms in this city, as has been said, but to a country town 100 miles from New York, in a private family, where she went under an assumed name. In her skirt lining she had sewed up all her savings, amounting to $100 in cash, and on that she relied to pay her expenses. A physician and a careful nurse attended her.

The findings of the unknown body was known to her, and the subsequent dispute whether it was her own or not, but she would not reveal her whereabouts. When Louis was arrested, she eagerly read the newspapers to see whether he was to be imprisoned for her murder. If so, then she had determined to return home and have him released. But if he was to be only for a time in trouble she would let him endure it. She thought that he ought to have some punishment for his neglect of her in Clifton. Ellen added that they had decided, in many conservations last summer, that they would immediately marry, but the dread of exposure, and, more than all, of facing their friends, who objected to the union, either on account of differences in religious belief or in nationality, kept them unsettled in purpose.

Ellen's story was told in intervals of conversation with Louis, and her words as well as her manner toward him showed that she was glad to have found a protector. There was even a sparkle in her eyes, a faint color on her pale cheeks, and a renewed vigor in her motions. When the wedding party alighted from the street car Louis led the way to the De Witt City mission chapel, in Greenwich street, near Cedar, a tiny Gothic edifice, where Sunday services are held. It is unsectarian. The Rev. George Haft, a Baptist minister, is in charge, however, and he greeted the wedding guests.

There was a brief prayer, invoking the Christ who was at the marriage in Cana of Galilee to witness and bless the nuptials, and a briefer address in which the little company was reminded that it is not good for man to live alone, and that therefore God made woman to be a helpmeet for him, when the minister joined the right hands of the couple and pronounced them man and wife. Louis meanwhile looked at the minister, and Ellen kept her eyes fixed on the floor. As a prayer was offered that the marriage might be recognized in heaven, Louis' eyes filled with tears that rolled down his face. Then Louis tucked something into the minister's hand. The minister held the outer door open and shook hands with each member of the party as it walked into the street. Up Broadway it went, and, in passing the flower stand in front of St. Paul's church, the reporter bought a bonquet of roses and violets and gave it to the bride. It was their only present. The newly-married couple returned to their comfortable room. Louis says they are to return to Statan Island to live, some time in this week.

STAGE ROBBING IN TEXAS.

It Is Not an Unprofitable Occupation.

[Galveston (Texas) News.]

The robbing of stages and mails beyond Fort Worth had become amusingly monotonous, if such a state of mind is possible, when a slight shock was given to the monotony by the recent casual shooting of one of the highwaymen in an unofficial interference with the regular order of amusements in Robber's Hollow. Doubtless the man Ross who fired the fatal shot will apologize to the State and federal authorities for his violent intrusion upon the scene, and serene impunity for stage and mail rifling, interrupted without their agency or sanction, will soon be re-established on the road to Fort Yuma. Doubtless, judging from the past, it is safe to assume that the stages and their contents, including passengers, will continue to be systematically robbed. Of course, on each repetition of the performance there is a new set of passengers, a new and deeply interested audience, so to speak, but the programme and the actors in these popular open air theatrical entertainments appear to undergo little or no change. However, it is early in the season yet, and possibly the managers and the scenic artists may have some novelty in store. Meanwhile, let us glance at a skeleton of the performance which has so long been on the boards, or rather on he wayside and the road, for a run of apparently unlimited duration.

At the usual hour the stage reaches Robbers Hollow, twelve miles west of Fort Worth. The two well-known villains in the play rush from behind their favorite old bush, down the well-beaten path, to the spot where the robbery is to take place. They do not need to shake their pistols sternly at the stage-driver to secure his attention, for the horses, intelligent brutes, stop of their own accord, as does the propelling power attached to a milk-wagon in front of a house of a regular customer. The driver seems to regard the subsequent proceedings in the light of a business transaction between the robbers and the [illegible] in the stage, in which it would be indelicate for him to intrude without a special invitation. As soon as they can do so with safety the passengers file out of the vehicle, fall into line, and hold up their hands. It is only a wonder that there is no photographer present to take a picture of the group, for publication in some Northern illustrated journal, as an inducement to stay away from Texas.

The passengers contribute watches, jewelry, pistols, and even money, to the general fund, with a promptness which suggests that they had been drilled for the occasion, or felt that they were likely to be drilled in case they were slow in their movements. Owing to the failure of the post office department to furnish the driver with a duplicate key to the mail bags, the robbers are obliged to cut them open and relieve the department of the responsibility of delivering to their proper address the registered packages. Everything goes on as regularly as clock-work. Occasionally the driver may urge haste, as he may be behind time; but usually before the horses are fairly rested, the heavily-laden robbers retrace their steps to their ancestral castle on the brow of the distant hill, just as we see them do in the theaters. Doubtless some persons will object that the foregoing is exaggerated and overdrawn. Be this as it may, unless more in done in the future than has been done in the past month, during which the stage has been robbed three times, it will not be long before stage robbing will be one of the recognized industries of the country, and the favorite school for the graduation of the heavy villains in the criminal drama.

LOST ON THE LAKE.

A Sailor's Terrible Death.—His Body Cast Uwon The Beach.

[Oswego (N. Y.) Palladium.]

Capt. John Walters, of the schooner Seabird, arrived here Sunday last from Trenton with lumber for J. K. Post & Co. The Seabird, with twenty-two other vessels, had been lying in McDonald's cove, riding out the storm. Upon reaching this port Capt. Walters learned of the finding of the yawl of the schooner Julia containing the body of Moses Dulmage, sailor, on the beach at Stony Point, Sunday morning. From the master of the schooner Olivia he learned that Dulmage was driven out of South Bay, Ont., before a heavy gale the previous Thursday night, and being acquainted with Dulmage's father, he telegraphed the facts to him and got an answer requesting him to get the body and bring it home.

Monday afternoon Capt. Walters took a team and drove to Stony Point, where he found that the body had been removed to Henderson harbor and buried. He pushed on and reached Henderson at noon Tuesday, took the body up and brought it here, arriving Wednesday noon. The corpse now lies aboard of his vessel, which is awiting a fair wind to sail for South Bay.

A THRILLING STORY.

The statement of this cruel fatality as gathered by Capt. Walters is as follows. Tuesday night, Oct. 31, ten vessels, among which were the Julia, Olivia and Ariadne, lay at South Bay point, the Julia and Olivia lying near to each other. About 7 P. M. Dulmage asked permission of the captain of the Julia to take the yawl and go over to the Olivia to visit some friends. The captain gave his consent and Dulmage went. He staid on the Oliva till between 10 and 11 P. M., when he proposed to go back. The wind, which was out of the northwest, had stiffened, and was blowing a gale with a big sea running. The captain of the Olivia says he told Dulmage he had better stay all night, but the latter said he was afraid the captain might want to go out before morning, or would want the yawl for something, and he started back. The crew of the Olivia watched him, and seeing that he was going to leeward, shouted to him to head her up to windward. They heard Dulmage call to the Julia to throw him a line, which was done, but he failed to get it, and drifted past the Julia and came alongside and pretty close to the Ariadne, which lay astern of the other two. As he came alongside he called to the Ariadne's crew to lower the boat and come after him, for he was going out into the lake. But it appears Dulmage was rapidly driven on before the maddened and hungry sea, and cried out to another vessel which he passed to save him, but no further effort was made, and he drifted out of sight crying for help. Long after he was lost to view in the darkness his distressing cries pierced the gale with piteous appeals for help. Sunday morning Mr. Smith, lightkeeper at Stony point, found the boat ashore just south of the lighthouse, with a dead and bruised body in it. Of the awful circumstances under which the poor fellow died, who he was, or how lost, he had no knowledge. The body lay on its face, with the head toward the bow. The legs were lashed to the seat and thwarts with the painter. The oar was found on the beach about five rods farther south, from all of which Mr. Smith concluded that the man must have been alive and was steering the yawl when he went ashore, and that he died almost immediately from exhaustion and reaction. He also thinks that he came ashore Friday morning, judging from the appearance of the floodwood and debris along the shore at that place. The storm did not abate until Sunday, and it is not strange that the boat and its awful freight should not have been discovered sooner. From South Bay point to Stony point is forty miles; and this terrible voyage young Dulmage made in that tempestuous night in the face of almost certain death. The horrors of that night cannot be painted. The annals of lake navigation show nothing more thrilling or pathetic.

It seems strange that, even on such a night, a man should be allowed to drift away from a fleet of ten vessels without further effort to rescue him than appears to have been made. Capt. Walters thinks that there was no intentional inhumanity, but that each waited for the other to do something, till the opportunity to act had passed and the poor fellow was beyond successful pursuit.

THE GHOULS.

A Confession of One of Them.

[Cleveland (Ohio) Special to Chicago Tribune.]

An interesting case of attempted grave-robbery has just come to light. Joiner, one of a gang who robbed Mr. French's grave last month, made a confession of an attempt upon the grave of Miss Critchlow, of Bedford, a young lady who died in August last of consumption. Upon arriving in Bedford, which is a suburb of the city, the robbers did not know where the cemetery was located, and at length concluded to find the village doctor to ascertain from him. Joiner accordingly feigned sickness, and, stopping at a store, the doctor was sent for. By some signal the doctor was given to understand the state of affairs, and, going to one side with the robbers, he told them that he did not know where the grave was located, as he did not attend the funeral, but his daughter did, and, if they would call later, he would find out and tell them. They did so, and he directed them to the grave, but warned them to be careful, as it was located next that of old Mr. Patterson, father of W. D. Patterson, superintendent of the city workhouse, and, as this body had been buried a year, it could be of no value. They went to the spot, and did make the mistake warned not to. Upon reaching the body they pulled at one of the ears. This is the test which is employed to see whether the body be good or not. If the ear comes off it is too much decomposed. The ear came off, and such a stench arose that all were made sick, and decided to leave the lot to get something to drink. When they returned it was too late to get the other body, and Mr. Patterson's grave was refilled. This story coming to Supt. Patterson, he went to the cemetery yesterday, and, opening his father's grave, found the coffin broken open and the ear gone from the corpse, as described. The doctor who assisted in this work, named Streator, died about a month ago. He was a leading member of the church, and much respected.

STYLES.

For the Ladies to Read.

The newest buttons are bullet-shaped. Seal-skin dolmans will not be popular.

Leather buttons are among the novelties.

Scarf-pins are very popular with the ladies.

All winter wraps and cloaks are very long.

Ebony-mounted silks are preferred for mourning.

Only light furs will be used for evening wear.

Felt and beaver felt bonnets will be worn.

Feathers in cashmere colors are novelties.

Turbans of silk are now worn by bridesmaids.

Fancy shoes will be worn with short costumes.

Gold cable-cord edges the brim of new bonnets.

There is a furore for all shades of dark rich reds.

It is very fashionable in Paris to powder the hair.

Chinchilla will be a fashionable fur this winter.

Dresses for indoor wear are generally en Princesse.

Dresses, to be fashionable, must be very short in front.

Brown is still a favorite color for children's dresses.

Hem-stitched muslin neckties are among the novelties.

The new styles of costumes for women are very masculine.

Invisible checks and stripes are the ruling styles for suitings.

Parisian ladies are wearing silk turbans for head-dresses.

Scotch plaid embossed velvet will be used for trimming hats.

We are now in what may be properly called "the opening season."

Leggins to match will be worn this winter with short costumes.

Slippers are now worn with a strap across the instep, but no bows.

Solitaire diamonds are still in high favor for engagement rings.

The embroidered handkerchiefs displayed are in exquisite patterns.

Fur trimmings and fur linings on cloaks are as fashionable as ever.

Plaid silk handkerchiefs will be worn around the neck this winter.

Handsome woolen fringes will be much used for trimming this winter.

Fur wraps and muffs will be more fashionable this winter than ever.

Sashes at the elbow and at the top are seen on many Parisian dresses.

Handsome hand-made purses are novelties, also velvet and leather bags.

Corduroy velvet will be largely used for the underskirts of winter costumes.

The richest of the artificial flowers of the season have velvet and satin foliage.

Fashion has decreed that hereafter ladies shall wear their finger-nails long.

New styles in silk hose are black, with embroidery in white and brilliant colors.

Feather trimmings retain the bold upon the affections of our wives and daughters.

Of all ungainly appendages to a woman's dress, the panier or bustle is ahead.

Scotch plaids in small patterns and quiet tones are fashionable for grown people.

One of the latest fancies in hosiery is that of polka dots in white on black ground.

The fashions in ladies' coiffures in Paris is to brush the hair high up from the neck.

The heads and breasts of Brazilian humming-birds are a new and favorite ornament.

Swiss aprons trimmed with lace and finished with colored bows are pretty for house-wear.

The latest in Paris for a lady's hat is one of tasteless silver braid, with daisies and ostrich tips.

Handsome mourning dresses are made of white cashmere-hair, and are trimmed with Russian lace.

The "beef eater" is the name given to the new English hat for ladies. Not a very poetical name.

Medium-sized bonnets are not fashionable. They must be either one of the extremes, very large or very small.

"The fashionable lady is already thinking about her fall sack," says an exchange. This may be a fall-sack-ation.

The costumes and cloaks displayed present a tempting array of reasonable fashions, and at reasonable prices.

New buckles for belts are of silver, engraved with quaint designs. Oil ers are of pearl, and very handsome ones are of jet.

A new freak of fashion shows the Jolman with a double skirt. It is not nearly as pretty as the graceful double-skirted dolman.

Gay-colored belts are worn with all costumes, but especially with black. Ladies who have a taste for embroidering do their own work.

A young lady of Utica, N. Y., has been unable to walk for two weeks, and may have to lose her limbs, through wearing colored stockings.

The panier has resolved itself into very small dimensions, and consists in the slight looping or draping of the back breadths of the over-dress.

The tight-fitting coat-sleeve remains in favor, and is now made with a slight gathering at the elbow, which makes it much more comfortable to wear.

There's a run on what is called Russian lace, much of which is made by Yankee girls in New England, and all of which is sold at St. Petersburg prices.

The "tramps' temptation" is a good name for those expensive silver-mounted velvet bags worn at the waist-belt by the girls of the period on promenade.

Parisian flowers seem now to have reached absolute perfection, and if worn on bonnets by ladies in the country the bees at once assemble in search of honey.

Edward IV. cuffs are in vogue. As we were not in England when the fourth Ned was we are unable to say whether the style has been correctly reproduced.

Those crazy shopping bags our grandmothers used to carry about have been revived in all their ancient glory, and a few modern embellishments tacked on.

In each new importation of millinery the all-red bonnets predominate, and are of all shades, from dark-maroon, or grenat, to a brilliant cherry color, called ainiole.

The cunning art of dress-making is now conducted upon quite a scientific basis; hence one finds perfect models—fits that cannot be rivaled for ease and correctness.

In jewlery tastes are running toward ancient and antique designs. Mrs. Noah's ear-rings at Mrs. Nebuchadnezzar's engagies would undoubtedly bring a big price.

Smooth hair is just now the distinguishing feature of Parisian brunettes. It is very trying to plain faces, and makes particularly young and pretty, ladies do not adopt it.

The ribbons this fall recall the rainbow. The colors are innumerable and the designs unique. The price might be knocked down a little without hurting any one's feelings.

Three, six and nine-button kids prevail. The side-seam kids are considered the most fashionable—probably because they require easier than those made after the ordinary style.

Furs must soon command attention, and dealers say—probably, or possibly, because they have a large stock on hand —that silver lynx will be in great demand by our leaders of fashion.

One of the prettiest of late novelties in ear-rings is a web of fine threads of gold in which is caught a fly in iridescent enamel. The entrapped insect naturally suggests the entrapper, and the young man besids it is the—&c., &c.

Young women who delight in "loud" costumes wear the cut-away coat, high collar and Stanley scarf, and seem pleased which people comment upon the impropriety and absurdity of their appearance. Such women have never been found to make the best of wives.

HOW LADIES CARRY PURSES.

Peculiar Uses of the Feminine Pocket-book.

It is an e-ffeminate trait, and one seldom noticed in the ladies themselves, that the majority of them never carry a purse after the manner of men. A woman's pocketbook is really an article of dress, a convenience and an ornament at the same time. It would be an exceptional curiosity to hear of a lady going out without her purse, even if she had but ten cents in it, and no immediate demand for that, nor any use for it, so far as she knew, while out.

That such a wonderful variety of purses are manufactured yearly, establishes the fact that they are a necessary or popular part of the feminine dress, and that there is a demand for the taste and attention of purse-makers in the great world of fash ionable trade that is of no meager importance. A lady's purse is presumed to be designed for the purpose of carrying sums of money, but the majority of them are miniature curiosity-shops.

It is safe to affirm that nine purses out of ten owned and carried by ladies contain no dozen or more articles foreign to money.

Go into any of our fashionable up-town retail bazars any day, and watch the process of the opening of a hundred purses, more or less.

First of all, the manner of getting at the contents of her purse is a womanly peculiarity, really ludicrous and interesting. From the amount of rooting and diving of the feminine fingers, the laborous digging into the compartments, it would seem as if all the money was glued fast to the uttermost corners.

Why women have so much trouble in getting at their money, particularly small change, is a good deal of a study.

A man whisks out his pocketbook and unclasps it with extraordinary energy, and seems to alight on the money at once on the first thing, as if it was full to the top and running over. He gives it a sort of emphatic bang and, as it opens, grasps it and thrusts it back into his pocket, in less time than a lady consumes in fishing her's out of her purse.

With a woman the hard work seems to be in getting hold of the money, shallow as the pocket is, and it seems to be the first thing, as if it was full to the top and running over. He gives it a sort of emphatic bang and, as it opens, grasps it and thrusts it back into his pocket, in less time than a lady consumes in fishing her's out of her purse.

With a woman the hard work seems to be in getting hold of the money, shallow as the pocket is, and it seems to be the last thing to be found after the search is instituted, from all the pockets to all the boxes, drawers and nooks in "my lady's chamber." It seems to be forever on the wing, getting behind the big Bible or under the large cover, behind the bureau in the work-basket, under the bed, on the mantle, and in the baby-wagon.

If there are any bills in the female purse they are generally crumpled up into mysterious wads, or rolled around a ten-cent piece and a few pennies. With the masculine pocket-book it is quite the reverse—it is always carried in a particular pocket—if it ever is—and they are generally well folded, although there are exceptions; when a man has but little money, the more carefully it is folded up. But the fascinating feminine is always demoralized—no matter what denomination a note may be, a five, ten or twenty, it is all the same, admirably crammed into the little receptacle.

It appears to be the general impression that ladies have more difficulty in keeping money inside the purse than gentlemen. It has a faculty of being always slow side and at all times hard to be got out by force, but evaporates in a mysterious way, perplexing to the owner and annoying to the furnishing agent.

No woman's purse is literally empty even if it contains no money. There may not be "millions in it," but in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred there will be a small variety stock for private use within.

Survivors of the Alamo.

Many Texans and Mexicans.

An venerable Mexican named Reigido Guerro, residing in San Antonio, applied last week for a pension from the State of Texas, on the ground that he is the only male survivor of the Alamo massacre, of those who were in the building when it was captured by Santa Anna's troops and the heroic defenders put to the sword. It has always been believed in Texas—and upheard the tragic story of the Alamo by men who lost relatives there, and who helped to defeat Santa Anna afterward at San Jacinto—that there was no male in the fortress escaped death except a doctor, and he was wounded. Quite a number of Mexicans, a few of them men of prominence, residing in Texas when her war of independence commenced, joined the Texans and fought with them. A few of those brave men still live in Western Texas. The Navarro, Manchaca, Mexia and other families of note were among those patriots, and their descendants are now in or near San Antonia and held in great esteem. It is possible that a few Mexican women died with the Alamo during its memorable siege. This would account for Guerro's presence on that bloodstained wall. He states in his pension application that "with five other men he attempted to gain the room occupied by Travis, Bowie, and Crockett, and at the other four were killed. When he gained the apartment he induced the women to accept him (Guerro) as his bedding and sit upon it when the captors effected an entrance. After they had made the capture of the place, he waited an hour on the spot where he had been sealed, and then passed out unobserved and hid himself in a house to which the women had fled and taken refuge."

Women and Home.

There is a bundle of delight bound up in the sweet word home. The word is lyrical of comfort, love, sympathy, and all other qualities that constitute the delights of social life. Were the every-day enjoyments of many of the humbler and affectionate families faithfully portrayed, they would exceed, in moral heroism, interest, and romance, most of the productions of the pen of fiction. The social well-being of society rests on our home, and what are the foundation stones of our homes but woman's care and devotion.

A good mother is worth an army of acquaintances, and a true-hearted, independent sister is more precious than the "dear five hundred friends."

Those who have played around the same door-step, basked in the same mother's smile, in whose veins the same blood flows, are bound by a bond tie that can never be broken. Distances may separate, quarrels may occur, but those who have a capacity to love any thing must feel at times a bubbling up of fond recollections and a yearing after the joys of by-gone days. Every woman has a mission on earth. There is some thing to do" for every one—a household to put in order, a child to attend to, some class of unfortunates, or the cause of needless humanity to befriend. That soul is poor indeed that leaves the world without having exerted an influence that will be felt for good after she has passed away.

The Primary Cause of a Distant Symptom.

Nervousness is rarely a disease in itself inherent, but is the lineal offspring of dyspepsia, in a majority of the cases. Indigestion or disturbance is at first trifling,but ultimately is the parent so undermines the general health as to produce consequences very threatening to health and nervous centre, the brain. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the most powerful medicinal opponent of the ravages of indigestion, and protects the system from many of them. The tremors, the unnatural anxiety, headaches, the sleeplessness and loss of of appetite which characterizes digestive irregularity and weakness, and which are almost invariably accompanied by an uncertain condition of the bowels and kidneys, and which are all eradicated by this matchless corrective, and when the nervousness does not proceed from the cause designated it affords most grateful relief.

Rheumatism of the heart can be cured. Dead this:

"I have been very much troubled with Heart Disease for the last seven or eight years, and have tried all to do any kindness work for two years. I have been obliged to sit up in a chair most of the time, and could not lie down. I got what is supposed to be a bad case of Locomotor, and other physicians, called my difficulty Heart Disease, and gave me but little encouragement to get my breath at times, and had severe shaking fits accompanied by palpitation of the heart, and have been in great cause of sudden death. I saw Dr. Graves' Heart Regulator advertised, and got a friend of mine attending to get a pocket-book in its contents, apart from its storing capacity for money.

Examine each of them, and it will be found to contain bits of dress goods small samples of ribbon and wools, a broken machine needle, a piece of lead pencil about an inch and a half long, with the point broken off; a lock of hair in a piece of white paper, a photograph, a recipe of some kind, and a few pins. The hair-dye, or some new cosmetic; a marriage notice from some paper; two or three addresses, mostly of retail medicine, or fortune-tellers and dress makers; a button or two, a dried verbena leaf, a broken ear-ring and a wishbone.

Is it any wonder they have such difficulty in finding their change! Yet, in the darkest night, and on the shortest notice, if necessary, they could point to that purse and find any one of the articles it contains The majority of these purses are carried in an outside pocket or in their hands, and generally half open. It is remarkable that ladies are not more frequently robbed of their pocketbooks than they are. The purse at home has a wonderful knack of never being in the same place twice, and never can be found quickly. When it is wanted a grand search is instituted, from all the pockets to all the boxes, drawers and nooks in "my lady's chamber." It seems to be forever on the wing, getting behind the big Bible or under the large cover, behind the bureau in the work-basket, under the bed, on the mantle, and in the baby-wagon.

If there are any bills in the female purse they are generally crumpled up into mysterious wads, or rolled around a ten-cent piece and a few pennies. With the masculine pocket-book it is quite the reverse—it is always carried in a particular pocket—if it ever is—and they are generally well folded, although there are exceptions; when a man has but little money, the more carefully it is folded up. We are now prepared to sell the fa-mous Singer Sewing Machines on time payments of $5 per month, at the TRI-BUNE Building. Give us a call.

We are pleased to announce that the oyster supper given at Bly's Hall, on Thursday evening by the St. Paul's Par-Guild, was a grand success and a very pleasant affair.

Attention is directed to the notice of sale of real estate in another column. Lists of lands to be sold can be obtained on application at this office, either in per-son or by mail.

Those interested in the preparation of the programme for the school entertain-ment on the 11th prox. are invited to meet at the TRIBUNE office on Monday evening for business.

Preparations are in progress for the grand entertainment, supper and ball to be given at Bly's Hall, on the evening of the 17th prox for the benefit of our schools. It will be the affair of the sea-son.

We received a pleasant call last even-ing from Gilbert A. Hayes, of Pittsburgh, Pa., who is on his way to Bismarck where he has extensive landed interests and is taking in the City of Pines en route.

Buy a box of envelopes at the TRIBUNE office, with your return card printed on them. We furnish them cheaper than you can buy them unprinted by the package. Convenient for farmers, as well as business men generally.

Dr. W. E. Griswold, dentist, at Head Quarters Hotel, will remain one week more and our citizens in need of any-thing in his line should not lose the op-portunity to avail themselves of his ex-cellent facilities and valuable services.

The first snow of the season, and in fact, we might almost have said, of the last twenty months, fell this afternoon, draping mother earth in her beautiful winter garb, and making things and our rooms lighter and more cheerful. It is still snowing as we write.

The new improved Home Sewing Ma-chines are fast becoming general favorites in Brainerd, and those who have used them say they are the best sewing ma-chines they ever saw. For testimonials we refer to Mrs. E. B. Lynde, dress maker, Mrs. G. W. Whitney, Mrs. W. Hartley or Mrs. W. W. Hartley, in Brainerd, Mrs. D. McNarny, at Bismarck, Mrs. Wm. Vye, at Fairhaven, Stearns county and a host of others, who have bought the Home at the TRIBUNE building, and would use no other.

DIED.

JACKSON—In Brainerd, on Thursday evening last, near midnight, the son and only child of John F. and Betty Jackson.

The bereaved family have the deepest sympathy of many warm friends in their hour of affliction. The funeral took place at the Congregational Church, yes-terday, and was largely attended by our citizens.

In explaining how Rev. Steele, of Appleton, became a Greenbacker, Charley Felker, of Oshosh, says: "Any man who has been a Methodist-minis-ter, and has been compelled to take his pay for years in cabbages, sheep-skins, chickens, night-caps, slippers, and cold victuals, couldn't be expected to entertain very vigorous opinions concerning the circulating medium of the country."—Peck's Sun.

A Remarkable Result.

It makes no difference how many Phy-sicians, or how much medicine you have tried, it is now an established fact that German Syrup is the only remedy which has given complete satisfaction in se-vers cases of Lung Diseases. It is true there are yet thousands of persons who are predisposed to Throat and Lung Af-fections, Consumption, Hemorrhages, Asthma, Severe Colds settled on the Breast, Pneumonia, Whooping Cough, &c., who have no personal knowledge of Boschee's German Syrup. To such we would say that 50,000 dozen were sold last year without one complaint. Con-sumptives try just one bottle. Regular size 75 cents. Sold by all druggists in America.

Don't be Deceived.

Many persons say "I haven't got the Consumption" when asked to cure their Cough with Shiloh's Consumption Cure. Do they know that Coughs lead to Con-sumption and a remedy that will cure consumption will certainly and surely cure a cough or any lung or throat trou-ble. Do you know it will cure when all others fail, and our faith in it is so posi-tive that we will refund the price paid if it ever does not benefit you? This is a fair proposition. Price 10 cts. 50 cts. and $1.00 per bottle. For lame Chest, Back or sides, use Shiloh's Cancer Plaster. Price 25 cts. For sale by

N. M. FADDEN.

Why will you suffer with Dyspepsia and liver complaint Constipated, and general debility, when you can get at our store Shiloh a System Vitalizer which we sell on a positive guarantee to cure you. Price 10 cts. and 75 cts. For sale by N. M. FADDEN.

A Card.

Having decided to leave Brainerd to engage in the jewelry business in the City of Hastings, Minn., I desire to an-nounce to my many customers and the public generally, in this town and vi-cinity, that I have disposed of my large and varied stock of first-class goods —watches, clocks, jewelry, silverware, etc.—to Wm. Ferris who has engaged the services of a first-class watchmaker and jeweler, and will succeed me in the busi-ness in this place.

Thanking my customers for the very liberal patronage I have received here, I bespeak for my successor a continuation of the same, confident that he is prepared to do first-class work, and furnish first-class goods as I have done at low prices.

Adieu.

Brainerd, Nov. 23rd, 1878.

ADALBERT LEBON.

Card of Thanks.

We hereby desire to tender our sin-cere thanks and gratitude to our friends, and citizens of Brainerd who have assisted us in the support of our recent trials, for the many kindnesses they have bestowed upon us during the sickness of our only child. The dear one left for a better home last night at 11 o'clock, and ours is now desolate and lonely.

Again, thanks to all for their generous aid in our affliction.

With gratitude yours,

JOHN A. JACKSON.
BETTY JACKSON.

Brainerd, Nov, 21st, 1878.

NOTICE.

Came in my enclosure on or about the 1st of Nov., one heifer about three years old, deep red with a few small white spots over the body, one horn a little drooped, partial white face. Any person claiming said property, proving the same and paying charges, including cost of this advertisement, can have the same by applying to the shercher.

PUBLIC SALE

MINNESOTA.

In compliance with an act of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, approved March 1st, 1877, entitled "An act to provide for the com-pletion of the railroad commonly known as the St. Paul and Pacific Extension line," I will sell at auction to the highest bidder for cash, at my office, in the capitol building in St. Paul, on Wednesday, the 27th day of November, 1878, and from day to day thereafter until the whole shall have been offered, about 60,000 acres of land as legal government subdivisions, situated in the counties of Morrison and State of Minnesota, through which the railroad is now completed and in operation.

These lands are advantageously situated, con-venient to markets, timber, water, good, well watered and gently undulating, and consist of timber land, meadow land, farming land, grazing land, pasture and meadow, and are all within ten miles of railroad stations on them within six miles of the rail-road track.

Maps are on file at the Executive Office, show-ing the relative situation of these lands, and de-scriptive lists of them can be obtained by ap-plication in person, or by letter to me, or to the publication office of this newspaper.

J. S. PILLSBURY,
Governor of Minnesota.

The CHEAPEST and BEST

FAMILY NEWSPAPER

Published in the Northwest.

The Subscription Price OF THE

WEEKLY

PIONEER PRESS

HAS BEEN REDUCED TO

One Dollar per Year,

And Fifteen Cents for Postage.

At this Very Cheap Rate every Farmer in the Northwest can afford to take the Paper.

This Magnificent Eight-Page Weekly, with its leaves cut and pasted in book form by machinery, will be sent to any address in the United States or Canada, for one year, for

$1.15

Including Postage, which must be prepaid by the Publishers.

While containing in a condensed form all the news of the day, the great Northwestern Weekly is specially devoted to the interests of Minnesota, Western Wisconsin, Northern Iowa, and Dakota, where it circulates in every town. It is now sent to about Three Thousand Post-offices in the United States and Canada. Its market reports, news columns, literary, farm and garden, and household de-partments are carefully edited, and its statistical tables especially selected, with a view to the peculiar wants of the Northwest. Through its large corps of special correspondents in every city, town, and important village in this great western region, it is enabled to supply far fuller and fresher State and local news of interest to its readers than any other paper. Without a rival among final publications, and surpassed by none from abroad as an entertaining, in-structive, and newsy family journal, it is far more valuable to the citizens of this region than any Weekly published in other States.

All subscriptions are payable in advance.

There will be no subscribers' clubs raised, but one uniform price for one or one hundred names.

Any subscriber desiring our Household Map can have same sent post-paid, together with the Weekly for one year, for $1.65.
