MIMOSA DREAMS.

IN the days of untold anguish that followed, what wonder if I forgot my father? But wonder if I fell? Still on the pain of repeating the story of the dream that I tell you now, I remember that it was my hand-made money that was gone. For the year that I did not pretend to justify my conduct, I would never again see the face of the man who had suffered so much as I could bear. At times I was faintly conscious of the hands that held me. But not until the dollar had been taken from me, and I was left alone, I realized the folly of my conduct. Then, indeed, I necessarily expelled me. I could not consider what was to be done. It was not long to decide. I would go on my own money sufficient to bear my expenses to South America. Once out of my father's hands, I would never again see the face of the man who had known only sorrow and disappointment.

I found no difficulty in obtaining work. In the first instance, I was employed to do some light work for a number of months. I had saved money enough to take me out of my father's hands. But, last winter, I was again employed to do some light work for a number of months. I had saved money enough to take me out of my father's hands. But, last winter, I was again employed to do some light work for a number of months. I had saved money enough to take me out of my father's hands.

SAVED BY LOVE.

Finally, I have a story to tell. Perhaps the most interesting of all. It is the story of a man who was saved by love. He was a man who had been in the hands of his father for many years. He had seen the face of the man who had known only sorrow and disappointment. He had seen the face of the man who had known only sorrow and disappointment. He had seen the face of the man who had known only sorrow and disappointment.
